(Closing New York Stock Prices)

TUNNEL TO HIDE TRACKS IF CITY
GETS $3,000,000
RIVERFRONT AIDSt. Louis Must Put Up
$1,000,000 if U.S.
Grants Money—Project Would Take One to Two Years.A tunnel 3000 feet long will be built on the St. Louis levee to carry railroad tracks past the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial if Congress appropriates the $3,000,000 requested yesterday by President Eisenhower for a start on the riverfront project.The House Appropriations Committee is working on a supplemental budget bill for the Interior Department. The memorial fund request could be fitted into this bill, a member of the committee staff said.The plan for a memorial to commemorate the Louisiana Purchase calls for relocation of railroad tracks to permit an unobstructed view over the projected park and the Mississippi river.There are five sets of tracks, three at ground level and two elevated, to be disposed of.
Under an arrangement worked out by the National Park Service with the Missouri Pacific and Terminal Railroad, the tracks would be in a tunnel with an 18-foot clearance. An earlier plan for a depressed, unroofed cut to screen the tracks was discarded.

Matching Funds From City.

Under a formula requiring $1 in local money for every $3 in federal aid, the city would have to provide $1,000,000 to match the congressional appropriation of $3,000,000. This would come from a $7,500,000 bond issue approved by St. Louis voters in 1953; only $2,250,000 of the bonds have been issued.Julian Spotts, superintendent of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, said the total of $4,000,000 in city and federal funds would pay for construction of the railroad tunnel and grading of the park site.
Ground would be filled in at the southern and northern ends of the park site to hide the tunnel approaches.Before the White House requested $3,000,000 for the memorial, the Interior Department had asked for $150,000 to be used to fence and landscape the Old Courthouse property.
The $150,000 item is to be acted on separately.If Congress appropriates the $3,000,000, Spotts explained, the National Park Service will ask the city to put up its $1,000,000.
Then plans and specifications for the tunnel will be drafted and a construction contract will be let. It will take from one to two years to build the tunnel.After the railroad tracks are relocated and the memorial area is graded, landscaping the park site would be the next step. This would require an additional appropriation by Congress and matching local funds.

Parking Lot Not Affected.

Construction of the tunnel, which would be just inside the memorial area paralleling the river, would not interfere with current use of the site for a municipal parking lot. A contract by which the National Park Service authorizes the city to operate the lot pending development of the memorial was renewed yesterday.Ultimately, however, the 4000 motorists who park their machines in the area would have to go elsewhere. Under an agreement with the Park Service, the city could build a garage under the memorial tract, but this is not a part of the federal aid plan.Last year Congress authorized the Government to contribute $5,000,000 to the memorial project after the federal budget is balanced. When President Eisenhower submitted a balanced budget in January, it opened the way for a congressional appropriation.None of the $5,000,000 in federal aid is to be spent on the Saarinen arch, Congress specified.
Eero Saarinen, head of a team of architects awarded a $40,000 prize for the best memorial design in a contest conducted in 1948, proposed a stainless steel arch 590 feet high to symbolize the function of St. Louis as gateway to the West, but the arch has been the subject of much controversy.The Saarinen memorial plan could be executed without the arch.The movement for the riverfront memorial got under way 23 years ago. The city, given assurance that the Federal Government would build a $300,000 memorial if $7,500,000 in local funds was provided, passed the bond issue, but a hitch developed after $9,000,000 was spent in clearing the 40-block site.President Franklin D. Roosevelt had planned to provide government funds by executive order, but there was a legal ruling that federal aid would have to come by appropriation of Congress. Years of marking time followed.

DRIVES DRINKERS
TO WATER WAGONGRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 2 (UP)—Health authorities today sought the cause of a mysterious allergy that could turn an alcoholic into a teetotaler.The allergy already has made abstainers of seven employees at a cabinet and hardware plant here when they found alcoholic beverages turned their faces bright red and gave them severe heart palpitations.A new employee laid the case before the State Health Department recently when he learned other workers complained they also "lit up like Christmas trees" after a little elbow-bending."Horseplay," said unbelieving health authorities. They suspected a prankster put antagonism—a drug which causes a violent reaction to alcohol—into the plant's drinking water.
A thorough investigation convinced them it was no joke.Samples of floor sweepings, air and other possible sources of the allergy were sent to the department's laboratories. The firm employs about 100 persons and the seven workers affected were in widely scattered parts of the plant.HUMANE SOCIETY OFFERING GOATS
AND CHINCHILLASThe Humane Society of Missouri, which normally deals in dogs and cats, announced today it also had eight chinchillas and six goats eligible for adoption.
The chinchillas were turned over to the society in one group.
The owner had been raising them for their fur, but gave up.
The goats, which include three of mixed breed and three of the aristocratic French Alpine variety, were just pets."We got a goat in here now and then," said Miss Shirley Feiler, kennel superintendent,
"but this is the first time I can recall any chinchillas. They look like they'd all make mighty nice pets. I guess the former owners just got tired of them, or they ate too much, or something."NEW YORK JUDGE FOUND

Yorkers trying to pay up on overdue traffic fines, it was disclosed yesterday.Justice Carson de Witt low violators Wednesday, the violators who had ignored their traffic tickets.The record showed the justice, who receives $15,000 annual salary, had 11 violations.HERMANN FREED

IN SHARP KILLING
AT SECOND TRIAL9 Ballots Taken in 19 Hours — Defendant Rearrested, Taken to Hospital.Thomas P. Hermann, who was once sentenced to 25 years for the murder of Dr. Cecil A. Z.
Sharp, was acquitted today on a second trial by a jury in the court of Circuit Judge Noah Weinstein at Clayton.The jury verdict came after 19 hours of deliberation and nine ballots that began last Wednesday night about 9:15 p.m.As Herman was leaving the Courtroom with members of his family, he was rearrested by county police under an application for hospitalization pending determination of his sanity.John F. Hild, 231 Newell Ferguson, foreman of the all-male jury that spent two nights in the courtroom, considering the evidence, said one of the decisive points relied on by the jury was the failure of Dr. Sharp's son, Cecil, to make positive identification of Hermann as the killer until five or six days after the shooting.
Hild said the testimony showed young Sharp was not positive in his identification at the time of the incident June 23, 1953, or at the inquest held shortly thereafter. The jury also took into account the fact the murder weapon was never found and the prosecution did not produce the screen door of the Sharp home at 9234 Clayton road, Ladue, through which the shot allegedly was fired, the foreman said.

8 to 4 on First Ballot.

The jury was preponderantly in favor of acquittal from the outset. Hild said. The first ballot was 8 to 4 for acquittal last Wednesday night, he said. A ballot yesterday afternoon was 11 to 1 for acquittal and the verdict came on the third of today's ballots. Veteran court employees were unable to recall any case requiring longer deliberation.As Hermann accompanied by his attorney, Henry G. Morris, and members of his family, stepped out of the Courtroom, Patrolman James Nelson of the county police department placed him under arrest "because of information we have received from a complainant that you are a violator."

gion Be Under Control of Arabs.AMMAN, March 2 (AP)—Lt.
Gen. John Bagot Glubb has been dismissed as army commander of Jordan by King Hussein, it was disclosed today.The firing of the famed British leader of the Arab Legion—known throughout the Middle East as Glubb Pasha—was a new blow to British prestige in this area.Gen. Glubb was escorted to the airport today under guard of 16 tanks. He and his family left by plane for London.The British Government, which set up Jordan's Arab Legion and has been subsidizing it, said it had assurances friendly relations would continue. But the Foreign Office in London said the abrupt dismissal of this distinguished officer brought deep concern to London officials.Britain installed Hussein's family on the Hashemite throne before World War II and gave Jordan its independence in reward as a reward for its remaining with the Allies against Hitler.Glubb, leader of the Arab Legion in the war against Israel in 1948, was dismissed as commander of the Arab Legion, which the army general staff, Britain pays Jordan $22,400,000 annually for support of the 20,000-man Legion. This is more than half the budget of the Arab kingdom.In January Syria, Egypt and Saudi Arabia offered Jordan an annual grant to replace the British subsidy. The declared aim of the Syrian-Egyptian-Saudi Arab pact was to strengthen Jordan against "any Israeli aggression," but westerners expressed belief another purpose was to strengthen Jordan against anti-western elements demanding that the Arab Legion come completely under Arab control.Ernie Hill, Chicago Daily News Post-Dispatch foreign service correspondent, said in a report from London that Glubb was dismissed by Hussein at the demand of Egypt's Premier Nasser to "wipe out the British influence in the Arab world."The dismissal ended 30 years of Middle East service for the tough, wiry little 59-year-old soldier who learned the ways of the Arabs on camelback and around the desert camps.
His enemies called him "the uncrowned king of Jordan."
An official announcement said the British would be succeeded by Maj. Gen. Radi Ounabb. To meet the opposition demands that the army be "Arabized," Hussein said he dismissed two senior British officers who had been serving with Glubb.Opposed by Extremists.
Extreme Arab nationalists long had opposed Glubb. His change brought jubilation surge after the British last year tried to get Jordan into the Western-sponsored Baghdad pact.The British move sparked violent anti-western riots in almost every Jordan town.
The opposition leaders made clear that Glubb rather than Jordan's alliance with Britain was their target. They said they were willing for Jordan to renege its 1948 treaty with Britain, which provides for the financing of the legion. It also permits the British to maintain air force bases in Jordan and provides for the return of British troops to the country in emergencies.King Hussein in a nationwide broadcast appealed for both the army and the public to remain peaceful. News of the change brought jubilant crowds into Amman's streets.
They applauded the king as he drove by.Glubb came to the Middle East in 1926, resigning his commission in the British army to become administrative inspector to the Iraq government. He transferred to what was then the British protectorate of Transjordan in 1930 and two years later became the colonial service officer commanding the desert area.Wearing Arab dress and riding a camel into remote desert areas, he coaxed the Bedouins into military service and fashioned them into the Arab world's best army—the disciplined, 20,000-man Legion.In 1939 he took formal command of the Arab Legion.
When Britain recognized Jordan as an independent kingdom in 1946, he became the army chief for the desert nation. Under his command Jordan's troops scored the major Arab military successes in the Palestine war.G.O.P. TURNS TO STRATEGY FOR ALL-OUT CAMPAIGN TO WIN CONGRESS CONTROLDEMOCRATS CALL WIDE DELEGATION OF PRESIDENTIAL POWERS ILLEGALConstitutional Issue Raised — Sparkman Demands Eisenhower List Duties He Would Pass On to Aids.WASHINGTON, March 2—
The Democratic campaign against President Eisenhower centered today on whether the delegations of power he outlined Wednesday night violate the "spirit" of the Constitution and its application over the last 150 years.This was the point of attack being discussed by those Democrats in Congress who had actually read what the President said.The idea was to keep the issue raised by the President's September heart attack on a higher level than that of health.
Most Democrats in Congress were unwilling to echo, even in part, the flat assertion of Paul M. Butler, Democratic national chairman, that the American people would never elect a President "who, at 65, has had a serious heart attack."But they were ready to agree with the last part of Butler's statement, that a man unable to be a "full-time President" should never be elected.The "Major Issue." Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas said in an interview:"The President's ability to discharge his functions as set forth in the Constitution is the major issue confronting the American people in this campaign."Fulbright and several other Democrats said they would bring a resolution before the Senate asking the President to resign the office of President and to be succeeded by a committee of the Senate.Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama, the 1952 Democratic vice presidential nominee, called on the President for "a full catalogue of these things.""What are they?" He asked.
"How many functions of government does Mr. Eisenhower plan to delegate to others? This seems to be a delegation to agents of the President, appointed by him, of powers specifically vested in him by the Constitution."The Constitution makes provision for the President to be responsible for certain things which no other person can assume. It seems to me the President's candid statement raises the most serious constitutional questions."Beyond Tradition.
The Constitution clearly provides for delegation of functions.
The development of the President's Cabinet grew out of that delegation.But Democrats were saying that the President's statement went far beyond the traditional concept of the job.
Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, said the President's address showed he lacks the understanding of the constitutional obligations of the presidency.
It is a very dangerous precedent to establish because it is bound to lead to administrative evils.
I don't believe the American people would accept this.

WARNING IS GIVEN BY KNOWLAND TO EISENHOWER TO HEED OLD GUARD

Senator Says Taft Faction Should Be Represented — Suggests It Provide Running Mate.

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
The New York Times News Service, Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.

WASHINGTON, March 2 — Senator William F. Knowland of California warned President Eisenhower yesterday that his re-election would be imperiled unless he gave heed to the wishes of the orthodox Republicans.

In addition to declaring that the Taft section of the party ought to be given representation in the administration if possible and certainly within the Eisenhower campaign organization, he suggested that the nomination for vice president of some member of this faction, rather than Vice President Richard M. Nixon, was not beyond the hopes of the orthodox wing.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, disclaimed any personal ambition for the vice presidential place but in no sense took himself entirely out of the reckoning. He added, however, that he "assumed" Nixon would again be the President's choice.

Steps Taken by Knowland.
In removing himself from what had been a provisional race for the Presidential nomination, which had been based on the assumption that Mr. Eisenhower would not stand again, Knowland took these other significant steps:

1. He publicly assumed the practical leadership of the conservative and right-wing Republicans who followed his Senate mentor, the late Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. This leadership has long been tacitly conceded to Knowland by many Taft men.

2. He implied that the Taft Republicans would expect from the President some sort of accommodation similar to that arranged between the two wings of the party in the 1952 meeting at Morristown Heights, New York, between Mr. Eisenhower and Senator Taft.

3. He asserted that the campaign to re-elect the President would be "no pushover," notwithstanding what he called the "over-optimism" of White House and Republican National Committee circles. "Not a thing," he said, "can be taken for granted."

4. He declared it to be "extremely important to consolidate the party" by concessions to "those who supported Taft."

These forces, Knowland asserted, "now feel that they have not been made so much a part of the team as their long service in the party warrants."

To Present Views.
He disclosed that he intended to "present these views" to Sherman Adams, the assistant to the President; to Leonard W. Hall, chairman of the Republican National Committee, and to the President himself.

Knowland's name had been entered for the presidential nomination in four states where the candidate's consent is now required—Illinois, Pennsylvania, Minnesota and New Hampshire—and in Alaska.

He had been prepared to go also into the primaries in Wisconsin and California.

He had made clear from the start that he would be a candidate only if the President was not available for renomination. Accordingly, the President having consented to run again, Knowland yesterday arranged with Vice President Nixon and Gov. Goodwin Knight of California to support an Eisenhower slate in California.

The Senator took the position that this action made it plain that he was backing the President's renomination and was no longer himself a candidate. Thus, since it was not possible in any case to withdraw his name from primaries in which it had already been entered, he took no further action.

Anxiety Over Campaign.
He strongly indicated his anxiety at the fact that the President was charting a campaign of little travel and few personal appearances.

There would be "great pressure," Knowland said, for the President to appear here and there in behalf of other Republican candidates, regardless of all present plans. "Not even television," he remarked, "can substitute for the personal appearance."

It would follow, too, the Senator added, that a "heavy burden" of campaigning would be put in these circumstances on the Vice Presidential nominee, on Cabinet members and on "all Republican leaders" in Congress and elsewhere.

As to the vice presidency, Knowland in reply to many questions gave this answer, in summary:

He had no reason to suppose that the nomination would be offered to him and he was not a candidate for it since he had "always assumed" that it would go to Nixon on any Eisenhower ticket.

To the inquiry, "Would you accept the vice presidential nomination if offered," he replied:

Miss Lucy's Lawyer Studies Possible Steps in Expulsion

AUTHERINE LUCY at LaGuardia Airport, New York, yesterday after her expulsion from the University of Alabama was announced.

Negro Student Barred by Alabama U. Goes to New York for Rest.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 2 (AP)—The case of Miss Autherine Lucy, Negro student who wants to continue her studies at the University of Alabama, was in a state of confusion today.

Miss Lucy, 26 years old, was "permanently expelled" by the board of trustees at Tuscaloosa at a secret meeting Wednesday night.

The trustees' action came within hours of an order from United States District Judge H. Hobart Grooms ordering her readmission to the university. She had been suspended Feb. 6 after students and others described by University officials and police as "outsiders" had rioted for three days over her presence.

Miss Lucy's attorney, Arthur D. Shores, said today that legal questions brought on by the expulsion "are being studied" to determine if further court action will be taken.

Miss Lucy was in New York seeking medical attention and "rest, peace and quiet," Shores said she is expected to return to Birmingham within a few days.

With N.A.A.C.P. Leader.
She left Birmingham yesterday in company with Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The N.A.A.C.P. has been backing her efforts in the last 29 months to be admitted to the university.

In expelling Miss Lucy from the university, the trustees accused her of making "false, defamatory, impertinent and scandalous charges" against university officials.

The expulsion resolution said, "no educational institution can maintain necessary disciplinary action if any student, regardless of race, guilty of the conduct of Autherine J. Lucy be permitted to remain."

She was enrolled at the university Feb. 1 in compliance with an order issued by Judge Grooms.

In the wake of the riots, the board of trustees ordered her suspension for "her safety" and the "safety of others."

Contempt Proceedings.
Miss Lucy's attorneys promptly filed contempt of court proceedings against 13 university officials and trustees. In the contempt motion Miss Lucy charged these officials had conspired with members of the mob to keep her from attending classes. The petition called the mob action a "cunning stratagem."

In the court hearing Wednesday, however, Marshall moved to amend the contempt proceedings, striking all references to a conspiracy.

The amendment, accepted by Judge Grooms, was protested against violently by defense attorney Andrew Thomas who demanded the right to answer what he called these "scurrilous" charges.

In his findings, Judge Grooms exonerated the trustees and officials of the contempt charges that the situation will present itself.

Knowland for Vice President Is Minnesota Aim.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 2 (AP)—A Minnesota conservative Republican said yesterday he plans to push a vote-getting campaign for Senator William F. Knowland of California in an effort to propel him into the limelight as a vice-presidential candidate.

John G. Alexander of Minneapolis said Knowland's backers in Minnesota would try to roll up a strong vote to advance the Californian as a vice-presidential possibility. President Eisenhower also is entered in the state primary.

on the ground they acted in good faith in excluding her from the campus after the riots. However, he ordered her readmitted by 9 a.m. next Monday.

Charge Dismissed Against Alabama Negro Attorney.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 2 (AP)—A charge of unlawful practice against Negro attorney Fred D. Gray, legal spokesman for bus boycotters, was dismissed in circuit court today when the state admitted it does not have jurisdiction.

The action not-crossing the case came at the outset of Gray's scheduled trial. Circuit solicitor William T. Thetford said the state could not prosecute Gray because the offense for which he was indicted took place in a federal building. Thetford said the issue would be brought to the attention of United States District Attorney Hartwell Davis for federal prosecution if he sees fit.

Gray was indicted for unlawful practice growing out of an anti-segregation suit attacking Alabama bus segregation laws which he filed in United States District Court in the name of five Negro women. He was indicted after one of the women, Mrs. Jeanette Reese, said later she had not given permission for the action.

MOLLET ACCEPTS INVITATION TO VISIT MOSCOW

To Go to Russia May 14 for High Level Talks — Move May Block Fall.

PARIS, March 2 (UP)—Premier Guy Mollet announced today he would go to Moscow May 14 for top-level talks with the Russians—a diplomatic gesture that may prolong the life of his leftist government. Foreign Minister Christian Pineau will accompany the Premier.

Political sources predicted Communists and rightists who had been organizing to overthrow Mollet next week will postpone the attempt at least until after the Moscow trip to keep France from "losing face." The Communists, who helped vote Mollet into office, had planned to turn against him when the National Assembly votes next week on his "get tough" Algerian policy.

The invitation to visit Moscow was extended last night by Soviet Ambassador Sergei Vinogradov, who made it clear that Mollet would be welcome either as Premier of France or in his private capacity as leader of the Socialist party.

Preliminary Pact.
Representatives of France and Morocco signed a preliminary agreement on home rule here today that also may improve the Premier's chances of victory in the Algerian vote.

The agreement formally acknowledged Morocco's right to independence, but simultaneously required the strategic North African territory to accept "bonds of interdependence" with France. It envisioned further negotiations for a detailed agreement to replace the Fez treaty, which made Morocco a protectorate of France.

Mollet has vowed to "mobilize the nation" against the Arabs who have been waging a campaign of murder and terror against the French in Algeria. It is this policy the Communists oppose.

A report today that at least 48 natives were killed in North Africa yesterday emphasized the seriousness of the situation. Algeria was the scene of most of the bloodshed. French security forces killed 46 terrorists and captured 47.

One rebel was killed and two were wounded in a clash in northwestern Tunisia. In Morocco, two unidentified natives shot and killed Thouria Chaoui, a pioneer aviatrice and a leading Nationalist. Their motive was unknown.

GAS BILL INQUIRY ENDS, TESTIMONY STILL CONFLICTS

FBI May Get Job of Sifting Truth From Stories of Neff and Politician.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 2 — The Senate select committee investigating political contributions from the oil industry in connection with the natural gas bill ended public hearings in its limited inquiry today and went to work on a report to be submitted to the Senate by March 10.

The hearings terminated on a note of testimony by witnesses so contradictory that Charles Steadman, counsel for the committee, said that it would be up to "some other agency," presumably the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to sift the truth.

Today's session was devoted to an attempt to resolve the conflict in testimony of Robert Goodwin, Republican national committeeman for Iowa, and John M. Neff, of Lexington, Neb., attorney and lobbyist for Superior Oil Co. of California. Neff's attempt to contribute $2500 from the personal funds of Howard B. Keck, president of Superior Oil, to the campaign of Senator Francis Case (Rep., South Dakota), when the gas bill was pending in the Senate, touched off the special investigation.

Denied Offering Gift.
Neff's accounts of his activities in behalf of the gas bill in four other states led to his testimony that he contacted Robert Goodwin, Republican national committeeman for Iowa about the contribution of Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Rep., Iowa, toward the gas bill, but that he did not offer campaign contributions as he had done in South Dakota and Nebraska.

Goodwin testified under oath today that Neff showed up in his office at Des Moines on Nov. 4 and said he was prepared to make a $2500 contribution to the Hickenlooper campaign fund and on a second occasion tried to give him $1000 for the Senator's campaign.

Neff's denial of money offers to Goodwin and of having made a second visit to him in Des Moines was supported today by affidavits submitted in person to the committee by Paul J. Gerdes, Neff's law partner; Ivan D. Evans, of Broken Bow, Neb.; Neff's counsel, and John H. Evans, Neff's son and his father's law partner.

Denies Gift Was Mentioned.
Gerdes previously had testified that he accompanied Neff to Goodwin's office at Des Moines in early November and was present when Neff re-

Dulles Hopes to Get Fresh Data On New Red Tactics in Asia

Leaves on 25,000-Mile Tour—To Confer With Nehru, Other Oriental Leaders, U.S. Envoys.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, leaving for a visit to Asia, said today he hopes to gain fresh, first hand information on "the seeming shift in Soviet Communist tactics" on that cold war front.

Dulles is scheduled to travel more than 25,000 miles in the next 20 days, conferring with Indian Prime Minister Nehru and leaders in other Asian capitals. He will also consult with American ambassadors to the Far East in a general conference in Tokyo.

"I shall emphasize in the countries I visit," Dulles said, "that the United States is the real friend of free Asia and that it can count upon us and that we have an understanding regard for the aspirations of its people to obtain the blessings of peace and freedom."

Dulles will go first to Karachi, Pakistan, for a meeting of the Foreign Ministers Council of the eight-nation Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty.

He recalled that the first council meeting was held a year ago in Bangkok, Thailand, and he said Manila pact nations had made "substantial progress" in military and other measures to secure "peace together with freedom and independence" in Southeast Asia.

Dulles met briefly with President Eisenhower this morning and then held a last-minute conference with Israeli Ambassador Abba Eban on the Israeli arms request before going to the airport.

The United Press said Dulles refused to give Eban a yes-or-no answer on the arms request.

Dulles ran into rough weather yesterday when he appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee to urge American membership in the Organization for Trade Cooperation.

Representative Mason (Rep., Illinois), told Dulles he was opposed to the OTC. He said he had voted against reciprocal trade programs since 1937, "and I don't want to implement reciprocal trade agreements now."

Dulles argued that OTC is intended to be only an administrative agency of 35 nations to police international trade and tariff agreements. It would provide the machinery for operation of the trade pacts worked out under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Representative Byrnes (Rep., Wisconsin), said that since Congress "has consistently refused to approve OTC, I don't see how we can approve implementing it" with OTC.

Dulles spoke of a shift in cold war policy which has given prominence to economic problems. He told the committee the significance of OTC membership was "very great" in relation to recent Soviet moves to extend economic help to other nations.

In a Senate speech yesterday, Senator Capehart (Rep.) of Indiana accused Senator Fulbright (Dem.) of Arkansas of trying to "vilify" Dulles for partisan political gain.

At the same time, Senator Lehman (Dem.) of New York, accused Dulles of "moral blindness" and called for "forceful and positive" action to force Saudi Arabia to quit barring United States soldiers of Jewish faith from that country.

Capehart was replying to an attack on Dulles by Fulbright in the Senate Monday.

Lehman's speech referred to an agreement between the United States and Saudi Arabia under which no American soldiers of Jewish faith are permitted in the United States training mission in Saudi Arabia. They are barred under a provision that the Arab state may turn back persons to whom it objects.

Dulles told his Tuesday press conference this was an "inheritance" from previous Democratic Administrations.

supported his father's version of what occurred.

When Goodwin took the stand, Steadman asked him if, in the light of the affidavits, he wished to change his earlier testimony about the alleged money offers and Neff's purported second visit. He replied firmly that he did not.

In closing the public hearings, Senator Walter F. George (Dem., Georgia) said he was satisfied that the investigation had "exhausted the facts" with respect to the money offer to Case. The "motives" of the individuals involved, he said, would be considered in executive session.

FREE HIGHWAYS IN ILLINOIS HAVE BEEN NEGLECTED, PASCHEN SAYS

Democratic Candidate for Governor Blames Stratton's Toll Road Program for 'Set-back.'

Free highways have suffered a setback in Illinois as a result of Gov. William G. Stratton's proposal of a $415,000,000 toll road program for the northern part of the state, Herbert C. Paschen of Glencoe, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, said yesterday at Belleville.

Paschen, who made several appearances in St. Clair county with a group of touring candidates backed for state offices by the Democratic state organization, said free roads have been neglected particularly in the area through which the toll highways will run.

"I am for toll roads in mountainous areas or where they are needed to connect two important points," Paschen said, "but I don't believe toll roads circling Chicago are necessary. It is a backwash step. This country got away from the idea of toll roads many years ago."

'Badly Handled.' Paschen, now serving as treasurer of Cook county, declared Gov. Stratton handled the toll road program badly from the beginning. He charged that hiring of Joseph P. Knoerle, a consulting engineer, to determine feasibility of the program on a contingent basis was wrong because he doubted that Knoerle could make decisions not clouded by prejudice.

The toll road program has not been the bonanza promised by its backers in other states, Paschen said. He pointed out engineers predicted 73 per cent of the users of the Ohio Turnpike would be trucks, but that actually only 32 per cent consisted of truck traffic.

Paschen also contended that Gov. Stratton, who will be a candidate for renomination at the April 10 primary election, directed the state police to make gambling raids in some Illinois counties primarily as a means of embarrassing leaders in Democratic strongholds. He said the Governor was not motivated by a desire to enforce the law where law enforcement had broken down.

Attacks Dirksen. State Representative Richard Stengel of Rock Island, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, attacked the voting record of incumbent Senator Everett M. Dirksen (Rep.) of Illinois and pledged support of any foreign aid program "if it is in the national interest, regardless of who the President will be."

He charged that Dirksen had ways voted with the special interests, for the fiduciary "give-away" for the natural gas interests, for tax concessions to large corporations, against a proposed 20 per cent tax cut for individuals and against measures to strengthen the Rural Electrification Administration.

Softens McCarthy Praise. "Dirksen has softened his praise of Senator Joseph McCarthy as his campaign for reelection has grown nearer," Stengel said. "But people will not forget that he was a leading spokesman for McCarthy and McCarthyism at the same time he was opposing foreign aid measures which would stop Communism abroad."

Another member of the party of candidates, David F. Mallett, candidate for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, suggested that an audit be made of a fund raised by a 2 per cent assessment of employees in the office of Secretary of State Charles F. Carpenter.

The issue of the 2 per cent assessment against Carpenter's employees was raised by a former employee who charged that persons not contributing to it eventually lost their jobs.

Carpenter has denied the assessment was a political "lug."

He said it was a fund established to meet donation requests from charitable organizations. Contributions are voluntary, he said.

Other candidates who spoke at party rallies in Belleville and East St. Louis included Roscoe Bonjean, candidate for lieutenant governor; James L. O'Keefe, candidate for attorney general; Arthur L. Hellyer, candidate for treasurer; James P. Alexander Jr., candidate for clerk of the Supreme Court; and Michael J. Howlett, candidate for state auditor.

Other speakers on the programs included State's Attorney Richard T. Carter of St. Clair county and State Representative Alan Dixon of Belleville.

SAFE BOUNCES OUT OF AUTO AS BURGLARS FLEE

A woman burglar and one of two accomplices fled a fast flight early today from a filling station at 3500 Big Bend boulevard, Maplewood, but their loot, a 750-pound safe, bounced out of their automobile trunk when the car hit a bump in the street in front of the station. The burglars kept going.

A witness, James Hlatt, a Maplewood street department employee, told police he saw the burglars' machine leave the station driveway, bounce when it drove into the street, and the safe pop out. A woman was driving the getaway car, Hlatt said. The safe contained about $100, police said.

An automobile believed to have been used by the burglars was seen in the area a few minutes later by two Maplewood policemen who were unaware a crime had been committed. The woman was a blond about 40 years old, they said. The burglars also stole a radio, a flashlight and some cigarettes from a vending machine, police said.

PUBLIC SERVICE CO. DENIED REHEARING ON RISE IN FARES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 2 (AP)—A motion by St. Louis Public Service Co. for a rehearing on its application for a $935,000 annual fare increase was overruled today by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

The commission, in an order effective tomorrow, allowed the company a fare increase which will produce an estimated $400,000 to $450,000 a year, less than half the amount sought. Under the commission's order, the company may increase the price of the regular weekly pass from 75 to 90 cents and the express pass from $1 to $1.15. The company sought authority for a 25-cent increase for the regular, express and student weekly passes.

MAN AND SON SHOT IN HOME BY MISTAKE

Shotgun Fired by Pool Player Who Had Fight With Their Neighbor.

Rufus S. Lee, 1861 Menard street, and his son John, 16 years old, were shot and wounded last night by shotgun pellets fired through the back door of their home, after they heard a disturbance in the yard and peeped through a blind to investigate.

Police said Jesse A. Hayden, 2906 block of Victor street, who was arrested shortly after the shooting, told them he fired twice at the door of the Lee home, and twice at the adjacent door of Elmer D. Inman, but intended only to hit Inman when he saw a shadowy figure. Lee was struck in the chest and face, and his son in the back. Five younger children in the house at the time were not hit.

Hayden told officers he and Inman had had a fight over a neighborhood tavern, when Inman won $5 and then refused to play another game. Each went to his automobile and got a hammer, and fought outside the tavern. Both suffered lacerations of the face and scalp.

Hayden said he chased Inman home, then went to his own home and obtained the shotgun, police reported. He gave officers the shotgun and a knife he said he used in the fight.

Lee, his son, and Inman were treated at City Hospital. Police took Hayden to the hospital, and he remained there for further treatment.

Hayden was booked suspected of assault with intent to kill and shooting into a dwelling, and Inman suspected of peace disturbance.

REVOLVER STOLEN FROM POLICEMAN WORKING AT HOME

Patrolman John Van Hook of Lucas avenue district was the victim yesterday of a burglar who stole Van Hook's service revolver and police identification card from a bedroom while the officer was working on his automobile in front of his home at 4048 St. Louis avenue.

Van Hook, a Negro, said the thief entered through an insecure back window and took the gun, card, $10 and a $75 wrist watch from a dresser drawer.

HORSESHOE NAILS PUT BRITISH ARMY ON THE DEFENSIVE

LONDON, March 2 (UP)—The British army, under criticism for painting road white so soldiers wouldn't stumble over it in the dark, was disclosed today to have hastily disposed of 12,000,000 horseshoe nails to avert further criticism.

The war surplus nails, rusty from disuse, were said to be enough to keep 731 horses shod for the next 38 years.

"What was the army doing with 12,000,000 horseshoe nails?" the tabloid Daily Mirror asked. "Did it imagine that there was going to be another charge of the Light Brigade?"

The huge surplus of horseshoe nails came to light as a result of a debate in the House of Commons in which War Minister Anthony Head said he had discovered some soldiers were whitewashing coal so they wouldn't stumble over it in the dark.

Head admitted that many army practices were carried out today because of tradition and that they do not make sense. He cited such practices as polishing the soles of military boots as well as the tops and the polish came in.

TWO REALTY LICENSES HERE SUSPENDED BY COMMISSION

The real estate licenses of Miss Paula Spalding and Andrew P. Zika Jr., who were indicted jointly by a St. Louis county grand jury last December on charges of embezzling $27,014 from the Land Title Insurance Co., were revoked yesterday by the Missouri Real Estate Commission.

The commission, which is presently in session at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson, acted to revoke the licenses on testimony and evidence heard in a session here Feb. 3.

In a report of its findings, the commission alleged that Miss Spalding, who with Zika operates a St. Louis county home construction firm, "did knowingly and intentionally direct the disbursement of money held by the title company to Andrew P. Zika Jr. and that Zika did accept and receive the money."

PACIFIC NUCLEAR TEST AREA TO BE CLEARED APRIL 20

AEC Announcement Fixes Danger Zone Slightly Smaller Than for 1954 Series.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—An Atomic Energy Commission announcement yesterday indicated a new series of nuclear weapons tests in the central Pacific will begin sometime after April 20.

The commission said that after that date safety precautions would be established over a 375,000 nautical square mile danger area surrounding the Eniwetok proving ground.

The notice was being sent out today to all marine, aviation and international organizations. The commission said the rectangular shaped danger area is slightly smaller than the danger zone used in the latter part of the 1954 series, but "is many times larger than the initial area used in 1954 and has been reoriented slightly for increased safety."

It was one of the 1954 hydrogen tests which sent a radioactive cloud well beyond the safety zone, dropping contamination on a Japanese fishing boat and causing protests abroad.

AEC Chairman Lewis Strauss has said the forthcoming series of tests would involve weapons generally "smaller" in power than those of 1954.

The announcement said that it was expected that most, if not all, of the danger area would be released from control by the end of August. However, the commission said, "it is not now possible to fix a final effective date."

The area designated by the commission as the danger zone embraces the Eniwetok and Bikini atolls and takes in an ocean expanse reaching north almost to Wake island.

RUSSIA CLAIMS HELICOPTERS BROKE LIFTING RECORDS

MOSCOW, March 2 (AP)—A Moscow newspaper yesterday claimed Russia's "flying freight-car" helicopters set two Soviet lifting records recently.

Pravda reported one helicopter reached a height of more than 2000 meters (6561 feet) with a four-ton load. A second with a two-ton load rose to 5082 meters (16,673 feet).

The newspaper said the results have been forwarded to the International Aviation Federation for registration as world records. (Available helicopter records do not show a category for weight lifting.)

TWO U.S. ARMY OFFICERS ON FORMOSA VISIT MATSU

TAIPEI, Formosa, March 2 (AP)—Two top United States Army officers on Formosa have visited the island of Matsu. They are Maj. Gen. George W. Smythe, head of the Military Assistance Advisory Group, and Brig. Gen. Theodore F. Bort, chief of the group's army section.

The officers spent 10 hours yesterday on the Nationalist-occupied island, nine and one-half miles off the Red China mainland. They conferred with the garrison commander, Maj. Gen. Hwa Shin-chuan, and visited underground fortifications and a field hospital.

EX-LABOR CHIEF FINED $5000 FOR RACKETEERING

Crime Has Bad Effect on Youth,' Judge Tells R. L. Wright Sr., in East St. Louis.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—East St. Louis labor leader, was fined $5000 and placed on probation for three years today by United States District Judge Fred L. Wham for labor racketeering. Wright pleaded guilty Feb. 24.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Wham said: "The effect of your crime goes down deep in the community. It has had a bad effect on the youth of the community."

"Testimony here has been that you are a man of unimpeachable integrity, yet, by your own plea you admit taking bribe money and damaging yourself and the community. Now is the time for a change in the attitude toward dishonesty on the part of union and government officials."

Judge Wham explained that because of Wright's ill health he was placing him on probation, adding, "I see nothing to gain by sentencing you to prison. Wright, who is suffering from hypertension, will be prohibited from holding union office during his probation."

Wright, of 327 North Sixty-seventh street, East St. Louis, pleaded guilty of extorting $1000 from the Mary Construction Co. by threatening to call strikes in 1951 on a natural gas pipeline project from St. Louis to Waterloo, Ill., for the Mississippi River Fuel Corp.

This was one count in a five-count indictment voted against him by a federal grand jury in East St. Louis. The other counts alleged he extorted $5100 from two other contractors. These, however, were not pressed by Assistant United States Attorney Edward Maag.

For many years Wright was a business agent for Local 520 of the International Union of Operating Engineers. He lost that job in a union election in 1953.

Wright was one of more than 50 labor leaders indicted under federal anti-racketeering laws following disclosures by the Post-Dispatch that money was extorted from contractors to keep labor peace.

PATRICK BYRNE, 95, DIES, ST. LOUIS BISHOP'S FATHER

Patrick Byrne, father of the Most Rev. Leo C. Byrne, auxiliary bishop of St. Louis, died today at St. Joseph's Hospital, Kirkwood, after a short illness. He was 95 years old and lived at St. Agnes Home, 10341 Manchester road, Kirkwood.

Mr. Byrne operated a grocery until his retirement about 25 years ago. He was a brother of the late Bishop Christopher E. Byrne of Galveston, Tex.

Besides Bishop Byrne, he is survived by five sons, Frank J., William J. and Cletus E. Byrne, all of St. Louis; Joseph P. Byrne of Kansas City, and Thomas C. Byrne of Los Angeles; two daughters, Sister Leo Christopher C.S.J. of Kansas City and Mrs. William Giblin; a sister, Sister Mary Rosina C.S.J., 18 grandchildren and 26 great-grandchildren.

Appointed M. J. CARROLL NAMED COUNTY CIRCUIT JUDGE

Governor Appoints Overland Man to Succeed the Late John A. Witthaus.

Michael J. Carroll of Overland, an attorney and a Democrat, was named today by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly to fill the vacancy on the St. Louis county circuit court bench created by the death of Judge John A. Witthaus Feb. 23.

In announcing the appointment, Gov. Donnelly said Carroll would serve in Division 2 until his successor is "duly elected or appointed and qualified." This means Carroll will serve until the general election in November when, if he desires to continue in office, he must be a candidate for the unexpired term of Witthaus, a Republican. That term ends Dec. 31, 1958.

Carroll's name was one of four submitted by the St. Louis County Democratic Committee, the Governor said. He declined to give names of the other three.

Former chief counsel for the old Missouri Unemployment Compensation Commission, Carroll became the first director of the successor agency, the State Division of Employment Security, after adoption of the 1945 Constitution. He left that office to become an associate attorney in the office of the general counsel of the Federal Security Agency in Washington.

A graduate of St. Louis University Law School, Carroll was admitted to practice in 1930. Since leaving the state's service, Carroll has engaged in private law practice with offices at 317 North Eleventh street. He is married, the father of four children and lives at 9744 Midland boulevard, Overland.

JOSEPH COSTELLO INDICTED ON HIDDEN WEAPONS CHARGE

Joseph Costello, ex-convict head of Ace Cab Co., was indicted yesterday by the Circuit Court Grand Jury on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, Assistant Circuit Attorney Eugene P. Freeman announced.

The indictment grew out of the arrest Monday of Costello at Tower Grove and Blaine avenues when detectives of the hoodlum squad found two loaded pistols in the locked glove compartment of his automobile.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation examined the $6375 in his possession at the time of the arrest to determine whether any of the bills were part of the Greenlee ransom. No ransom bills were found.

Costello, who has been a central figure in the Greenlee ransom investigation, was released on $1000 bond after questioning by Chief of Detectives James Chapman and Lt. John Doherty, head of the hoodlum squad.

Appointed M. J. CARROLL NAMED COUNTY CIRCUIT JUDGE

Governor Appoints Overland Man to Succeed the Late John A. Witthaus.

Michael J. Carroll of Overland, an attorney and a Democrat, was named today by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly to fill the vacancy on the St. Louis county circuit court bench created by the death of Judge John A. Witthaus Feb. 23.

In announcing the appointment, Gov. Donnelly said Carroll would serve in Division 2 until his successor is "duly elected or appointed and qualified." This means Carroll will serve until the general election in November when, if he desires to continue in office, he must be a candidate for the unexpired term of Witthaus, a Republican. That term ends Dec. 31, 1958.

Carroll's name was one of four submitted by the St. Louis County Democratic Committee, the Governor said. He declined to give names of the other three.

Former chief counsel for the old Missouri Unemployment Compensation Commission, Carroll became the first director of the successor agency, the State Division of Employment Security, after adoption of the 1945 Constitution. He left that office to become an associate attorney in the office of the general counsel of the Federal Security Agency in Washington.

A graduate of St. Louis University Law School, Carroll was admitted to practice in 1930. Since leaving the state's service, Carroll has engaged in private law practice with offices at 317 North Eleventh street. He is married, the father of four children and lives at 9744 Midland boulevard, Overland.

people, once they recognize the President's purpose, will elect a man who promises to pass the buck to his subordinates."

Some Democrats refused to discuss the President's health or his second-term plans at all. They were fearful that an attack on the President at this time, just after his announcement, would backfire.

The three leading contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination were divided, two against one, on whether Mr. Eisenhower's decision to restrict his activities because of his heart attack should be an issue in the campaign.

Adlai E. Stevenson in a statement here and Gov. Harriman at an Albany press conference were agreed that the health-imposed restrictions should become an issue.

Senator Estes Kefauver disagreed. "No I do not," he answered. "I think he's explained to the American people just what the condition of his health is. As for myself, I have always made it a practice never to talk about another person's health or his personal appearance."

Stevenson issued his statement yesterday before leaving here by plane for a five-day, 30-speech tour of Minnesota. It read:

"President Eisenhower spent 20 minutes last night telling the American people not what he is going to do, but rather what he is not going to do. I was amazed to hear him say on his return from another long absence that he has fully performed the duties of the presidency for the past few weeks."

"While I pray for his good health, I also respect a great office, which cannot be conducted on a part-time basis. All of us felt great sympathy for the President during the period of his illness and accepted the fact that he would be temporarily unable to fully manage the hardest job on earth. Now, however, he evidently proposes to make this condition permanent."

Gov. Harriman was equally strong in his approach to the Eisenhower announcement, saying of his health report: "I think the President by his television program or broadcast last night has made it a major issue." It begins to look "more and more" that Mr. Eisenhower would become a "part-time President if re-elected in November to a second term."

By the Associated Press.
Study of Law to Go Ahead.
Representative Keating (Rep.), New York, said today it may now be "inopportune" for Congress to debate legislation for a temporary successor to a disabled President. He said that in view of President Eisenhower's decision to run again, "we probably won't be able to keep politics out of such discussions. But Representative Celler (Dem.), New York, said the need for such legislation is greater than ever. He predicted a good chance for its passage at this session."

"We have kept personalities out of the discussion so far, we have to continue to keep them out and we will keep them out," he said. Celler is chairman and Keating the senior Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee and of its subcommittee considering such legislation. The proposal would set up procedures for a Vice President to take over the duties of the presidency during a Chief Executive's inability and to hand them back later.

Celler and Keating agreed in separate interviews that the subcommittee should go ahead with its study of the problems. Celler said hearings would begin probably April 11, with former Presidents, Vice Presidents and Cabinet members invited to testify.

Both also said they do not think Mr. Eisenhower's election chances would be affected one way or the other by passage of a temporary succession law.

NIXON PICKED

Eisenhower has a great and frequently expressed admiration. Their argument was based on the conviction that, because of the opposition to Nixon among independent voters and among certain minorities, he would be a liability to the ticket.

Stop-Nixon Leaders.
The most articulate persuaders in the anti-Nixon faction are reported to have been Gen. Lucius Clay, long-time friend and associate of the President, and Sidney J. Weinberg, senior partner in Goldman, Sachs, New York investment house, and a veteran Eisenhower cheerleader.

Paul G. Hoffman, spokesman for the liberal wing of the Republican party, also was said to have taken part, but Hoffman insists that he had nothing to do with the stop-Nixon movement.

These men helped to generate the enthusiasm that made it possible in the months leading up to the 1952 conviction for Gen. Eisenhower, a newcomer to politics, to defeat the late Senator Robert A. Taft who through long party service had earned the affectionate title of Mr. Republican.

While they have never been taken into the inner council of the G.O.P.—and they will not talk about their unsuccessful effort to dislodge Nixon—they have continued to have the confidence of the man in the White House. Clay is in the picture both as a companion in arms of Gen. Eisenhower and as one of the group of business executives who have golfed and fished with the President. He is chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Continental Can Co.

Just as the anti-Nixon thought they had succeeded in their move to sidetrack the controversial young Vice President, the pro-Nixon faction opened a counter-attack. The triumvirate speaking in behalf of the Vice President represented the real powerhouse of this Administration—Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey.

These men do not see eye to eye on all issues, but in this instance they were united in the belief that dropping Nixon would have a far more disruptive effect on the party and in the country than going ahead with the same captain and co-captain of the team.

Dropping Nixon would, in the first instance, further doubts about the President's ability to go the full four years. Also, and this was a more important factor, the Vice President has powerful support within the Republican party. He is a hero to many Republicans who regard him as a young St. George with a record of having first brought down the Communist dragon. The Nixon strength is largely in the right wing of the party.

Dewey's Position.
It has been reported that Dewey himself is interested in the vice presidential nomination, but this was denied in behalf of the former New York Governor who is vacationing in Miami Beach, Fla. Dewey has several times said that he hoped his party "would offer the same ticket in '56 as in '52." He said this in the White House when he came out of the President's office three weeks ago after a long conference with Mr. Eisenhower.

A good case can be made that Dewey is a more controversial figure within the party than Nixon. Dewey was denounced by Senator Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois at the Republican convention four years ago. Dirksen, to the intense satisfaction of the nationalists and the isolationists, declared in tones of dramatic fury that Dewey, the internationalist, had twice led the party to ignominious defeat and now proposed to do it again. The New Yorker, now senior partner in a highly successful law firm, was the unsuccessful G.O.P. candidate in 1944 and 1948.

operation is as smooth and as efficient as anything this town has seen in a long time. The Dewey-Brownell combination is an old one, going back almost to the beginning of Dewey's early career. Brownell has made major blunders, but he continues to be an effective and a ruthless political operator. Humphrey is today, as he has been almost from his arrival in Washington more than three years ago, the most attractive, persuasive and able member of the Eisenhower team. This is, of course, quite apart from what anyone may think of his conservative budget-balancing views.

The full story of the strategy leading up to the President's declaration that he would seek a second term will be told only when all the memoirs are in. Mr. Eisenhower suggested at his press conference that he intended to look up his own account to be released not earlier than twenty-five years after his death. But even without the full narrative the masterful way in which these strategists have held the party together around Mr. Eisenhower, the symbol, in the long period of waiting is something to reckon with.

EISENHOWER SAID TO BE FOR NIXON

By W. H. LAWRENCE

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times News Service.)

WASHINGTON, March 2 — President Eisenhower will support Vice President Nixon for renomination if Nixon wants it.

This was the word being passed today by a highly-qualified source to influential Republican leaders to head off a developing battle over second place on the G.O.P. ticket.

It was emphasized that the initial decision about running again is up to Nixon and he has not made it yet.

Some highly-placed Republicans are arguing against Nixon's renomination in the light of the 65-year-old President's Sept. 24 heart attack. They argue that the ticket could be strengthened by nominating a man other than Nixon, who is the center of sharp partisan controversy.

The argument is made that since no President has lived to be 70 years old in office, with or without a preceding heart condition, voters will pay more attention this year to the qualifications and personality of the Vice President who might succeed to the highest office.

Nixon Might Not Run.
While declaring Mr. Eisenhower's unreserved support of Nixon for whatever post he might want, the qualified source said that it was conceivable that Nixon might decide his own political ambitions for an eventual try at the presidency in his own right would best be served by not seeking re-election. If that were to happen, he could have a Cabinet post or anything else he desired in a second Eisenhower Administration if the Republicans were returned to power.

The source pointed out that since John Adams, no Vice President who served two terms has ever been elevated to the presidency except by the death of the President. The political realities confronting Nixon, he added, are underlined by the fact that Mr. Eisenhower is the first President affected by the constitutional two-term limitation.

If the President is re-elected, the field of potential candidates for the 1960 G.O.P. presidential nomination will open immediately after the November 1956 elections. Nixon might feel he could better serve his own ambitions from another vantage point than the limiting confines of the vice presidency.

Won't 'Ditch' Nixon.

Reports that the President might join in efforts to "ditch" the young Vice President were labeled as "nonsense."

Two reasons were given for the President's failure to give Nixon an automatic immediate endorsement as he had two clear opportunities to do at Wednesday's news conference. One was that Mr. Eisenhower, while announcing his availability, was himself raising the question of whether the Republican convention would wish to renominate him in the light of limitations imposed by his Sept. 24 heart attack. Because of that attack, he was cutting down on the amount of time he could give to the presidency, and also he was unwilling to campaign in the traditional fashion either for renomination or re-election.

The President, of course, does not doubt that he will be renominated by acclamation. But the public position he deliberately took was one of leaving his re-election first up to the Republican convention and secondly to the country as a whole.

He could not, within that framework, appear to be hand-picking his running mate at this stage about six months before the convention has a chance to decide if it wants to renominate him for President.

And he could not commit Nixon until the Vice President had made up his own mind.

Will Act at Right Time.
But when the President is renominated, if Nixon wants it, Mr. Eisenhower will take the steps necessary to have the Vice President renominated.

The source described this as not only present, but future, policy of Mr. Eisenhower. He said the President was totally unimpressed with arguments that replacement of Nixon by another vice presidential nominee would strengthen the ticket.

Meanwhile, George M. Humphrey, Secretary of the Treasury and one of those mentioned as a possible vice presidential nominee in place of Nixon, announced formally yesterday he was "not a candidate in any way" and did not expect to become one.

NIXON KEEPING IN BACKGROUND.
Won't See Reporters.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—Vice President Nixon—center of much political speculation—is keeping out of the public eye and refuses to see reporters.

Yesterday others took over his routine job of presiding over the Senate session, as they do most of the time. Last night, however, Nixon emerged in white tie and tails to go to the Italian Embassy with Mrs. Nixon. They were guests of Italian President and Signora Giovanni Gronchi at a dinner party.

The American said the incident appeared to be an attempt to discredit the Viet Nam government as the republic's first constitutional Assembly election neared, but he did not amplify.

Nixon Is Point of G.O.P. Spear, Democrats United Against Him

His Hollywood Appearance, Speeches on Dishonesty and Virtue Anger Political Foes.

By JAMES RESTON
The New York Times News Service, (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, March 2 — The man in the news today (who wishes he weren't quite so much in the news) is Richard Milhous Nixon, the 43-year-old Vice President of the United States.

He is the lightning rod of the Republican party. All the flashes of Democratic anger and frustration descend on him. Harry S. Truman, Adlai E. Stevenson, Gov. Averell Harriman of New York, and Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee may differ on a thousand things, but in their personal antipathy to Nixon they are united.

Why is this? Part of the explanation is in the role he has played since he became Vice President. He has taken on, at the request of the President, who does not like party politics, the role of principal party spokesman. For the last three years he has been the prosecutor of the Democratic party. He has, in short, been the point on the Republican spear.

The Hollywood Image. Part of the explanation too, is personal. Like Thomas E. Dewey of New York, his personal appearance, his dress, his platform manner, are all impeccable but seem contrived. If Mr. Eisenhower is the football coach image in American life, Nixon is the Hollywood image, as well-groomed and smooth as a Hollywood actor, but as serious and determined as Billy Graham.

At the same time, he has what the Democrats call "an instinct for the jugular." In his campaigning, he conveys an impression of righteous sincerity, but he concentrates on the inflammatory issues, and constantly manages to imply that the Democrats were not only wrong but that they were wrong for sinister reasons.

In the 1954 campaign, he asserted in Las Vegas, Nev. (Oct. 24), that Adlai E. Stevenson "has not changed since he testified for Alger Hiss." Mr. Stevenson had given an affidavit regarding Mr. Hiss at the request of the court. In mentioning Secretary Dulles, he said on March 15 of the same year, "isn't it wonderful that we finally have a Secretary of State who isn't taken in by the Communists, who stands up to them?"

Dishonesty and Virtue. He is controversial not mainly because he has raised the Communist issue and blamed Democratic "softness on Communists"—for the loss of China—but because he has implied dishonorable motives while claiming virtuous motives to himself and his party.

These things have had political consequences, which is why Nixon is in the news today. Some influential members of his own party have said that he is now such a controversial figure that he would hurt the party in a second campaign with an ailing President.

Others, with powerful support in the party organization, applaud the very tactics the Democrats and others condemn, and think he is precisely the kind of spear the G.O.P. needs in a war with the Democrats. Thus, he is at a critical point in a remarkable career. He has fought his way up the hard way and is now at the $32,000 question. He came from a poor Quaker family, was graduated second in his class at Whittier (Calif.) College in 1934, won a scholarship to Duke University Law School, and worked his way the rest of the way through there. He left there with honors in 1937.

Married in 1940 to Pat Ryan, a Whittier schoolteacher he met when playing a district attorney in a local theater group, he came to Washington a month after Pearl Harbor to work as a lawyer in the office of Price Administration.

After six months of that, he joined the Navy and ended up 15 months as an operations officer in the South Pacific Combat Air Transport Command.

Rapid Rise in 13 Years. No man in American politics has gone so far in politics in the last 10 years except his chief. He represented the old Twelfth California District (eastern part of Los Angeles county, including Whittier and San Marino) from 1947-50, ran successfully for the Senate in 1950, and remained there until the 1952 presidential race, when Mr. Eisenhower listed his name with four others as possible vice-presidential material. A committee of Eisenhower political advisers picked Nixon.

It was while he was in the House that he was assigned to the Un-American Activities Committee and played an important, perhaps even decisive role, in pursuing the investigation that led to the exposure and conviction of Alger Hiss. In this he was greatly assisted by the late Burt Andrews, former chief Washington correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune.

As Vice President he may have infuriated the Democrats and alienated many independents, but he won the respect of the President and the Cabinet.

Even his political enemies concede that he conducted himself in the critical part of the President's illness with restraint and mature responsibility. His political advisers urged him to seek a commitment from the President on a second vice-presidential nomination before the President made up his mind —a maneuver which many observers here think would have succeeded—but he refused to do so.

"Let's leave that to the President," he said. "That's where the decision lies now."

McKAY INDICATES HE MAY RETIRE VOLUNTARILY JAN. 20

WASHINGTON, March 2 (UP) —Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay indicated today he does not wish to serve another four years even if President Eisenhower should be re-elected and appoint him.

McKay, who has indicated before that he wanted to retire, was asked by a reporter if President Eisenhower's decision to run again meant that he would like to serve as secretary for another four years.

"Not necessarily," McKay replied. "My enlistment will be up next Jan. 20, then I may be free—I don't know."

8 BILLION VOTED BY HOUSE GROUP FOR 24 AGENCIES

Funds for Fight on Diseases Increased, Civil Defense Appropriation Cut.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—The House Appropriations Committee today recommended a big boost in funds to fight cancer, heart trouble and other diseases and a cut in the appropriation for civil defense, in approving expenditure of $8,301,508,041 to finance 24 Government agencies.

The money is for use in the fiscal year starting July 1 and is $134,153,641 more than President Eisenhower had requested. However, the increase was more than accounted for by the committee's decision to add $305,000,000 more than Mr. Eisenhower had requested for the civil service retirement fund.

The committee said the extra money would help keep the fund on a sound actuarial basis. It noted that the fund technically has a deficit of $13,400,000,000 because the Government had not been regularly paying its share to supplement the 6 per cent contributions of federal employees.

Civil Defense Cut. One of the sharpest cuts, $37,100,000 below the President's request, was made in funds for the Civil Defense Administration, for which the committee voted $36,100,000.

For operation of the national health institutes which conduct research in medicine, the committee voted $135,525,000. This is $9,000,000 more than Mr. Eisenhower requested and $37,102,000 more than the institutes received this year.

The committee said the extra money would help attain "maximum benefits that can reasonably be expected" from research programs now under way. It earmarked $4,000,000 of the additional money for training of scientists and other research workers.

The National Cancer Institute was allotted $34,437,000, a boost of $2,000,000 over the President's proposal; the Mental Health Institute $23,749,000, an increase of $2,000,000; the Heart Institute $25,106,000, a $3,000,000 hike; the dental program $3,471,000, a boost of $500,000; the arthritis and metabolic diseases program $13,845,000, an increase of $500,000, and the neurology and blindness programs $14,196,000, a hike of $2,000,000.

For microbiology activities the committee voted $8,799,000, a cut of $1,000,000.

Labor Department Rapped. The committee criticized the Labor Department for what it called slow progress in developing programs to promote employment of older workers and to train nurses.

The funds for the 24 agencies financed by the committee's proposals were included in two separate bills. Both are scheduled for House debate and action next week.

More than half of the total was voted for the Veterans Administration. The $4,720,715,800 for that agency represented an increase of $1,220,860 in the budget requested by Mr. Eisenhower, but included all money requested for benefit programs for veterans and some increases for rehabilitation of hospitals and facilities.

3 HURT IN COLLISION AT LINDELL, DES PERES

Three men were injured, two seriously, in a collision of automobiles at Lindell boulevard and Des Peres avenue early today.

Injured were Ruby Bowman, a press operator, 6743 Robert avenue, who suffered a head injury and broken left arm and ribs; Heinz Tasche, an importer, 5463 Delmar boulevard, head and internal injuries, and Thomas Warner, torch cutter, 8661 Ardella avenue, St. John, head injuries. All were taken to City Hospital, Warner being released after treatment.

Warner, only one of the three able to make a statement, said he was a passenger in Bowman's automobile, which was moving north on Des Peres across Lindell when struck by Tasche's eastbound vehicle. He said Bowman stopped at the intersection, a four-way stop. Police quoted two witnesses in a car behind Tasche as saying he was traveling 60 miles an hour and failed to stop.

4 KILLED IN OKLAHOMA AS PLANE CRASHES, BURNS

OKMULGEE, Okla., March 2 (UP)—Four persons, one of them tentatively identified as a daughter of a state turnpike official, were killed today when a two-engine airplane crashed and burned seven miles north of Okmulgee.

Papers found in a woman's purse in the wreckage led authorities to believe one of the victims was Mary Geraldine Jarboe, 19 years old, daughter of Joe Jarboe of Tulsa, who is a member of the Oklahoma turnpike authority.

Papers in the wreckage indicated one of the victims was Rex Oscar Gibson of Tulsa. The bodies of the victims were burned beyond recognition. Holly said it could not be determined immediately whether the others were men or women.

ROBBED OF $400, BEATEN

A Clark filling station at 7842 North Broadway was robbed of about $400 last night by a man with a revolver who forced an attendant, Paul Thompson, to open a safe, then pushed him into a washroom and struck him on the head, police reported.

Thompson declined medical attention. He said the robber first asked about cashing a check and drew the pistol when Thompson asked whether it was a payroll check.

HAROLDS CLUB IN RENO IS SOLD FOR $14,000,000

RENO, Nev., March 2 (AP)—Harolds Club, which in 21 years grew from a $500 bankroll into the world's biggest gambling house, was sold last night for close to $14,000,000—cash.

The vast enterprise, by far the biggest moneymaker in Nevada—the nation's only state with legal gambling—was sold to a San Francisco property-management firm headed by Jules J. Agostini Jr.

Agostini, in his early 40s, never has had a connection with gambling. His firm, the Morgan-Agostini Properties Co., owns 28 San Francisco bay area buildings.

In acquiring Harolds Club with its 70 gambling games and more than 800 slot machines the firm also comes into possession of the club's huge parking garage, a million-dollar motel, a trapshooting country club, several warehouses, several hundred acres of ranchland near Reno, extensive business property and numerous subsidiary holdings.

Known in local gambling circles as "the factory," Harolds Club takes in more than $8,000,000 yearly.

STEVENSON ASSAILS G.O.P. ON LABOR LAW

Charges It Failed to Make Taft-Hartley Changes as Promised.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 2 (AP)—Adlai Stevenson said last night the Republican Administration has failed to keep promises it made about changes in the Taft-Hartley labor law.

The candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination made the charge as he arrived by plane to start a five-day campaign swing in Minnesota.

Stevenson told an estimated 400 persons at a joint AFL-CIO meeting that, despite Republican assurances about what was to be done for labor, nothing has happened.

"The only changes have been in interpretations of the law by members of the National Labor Relations Board," Stevenson said in his extemporaneous talk. "And these interpretations have resulted in pro-management decisions at a 20 to 1 ratio."

"The late Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep.), Ohio, co-author of the labor act, himself proposed 17 amendments to it as long ago as 1949. But even his suggestions have not yet been incorporated into law."

Stevenson, introduced by Minnesota's Gov. Freeman, said he was not competing against meeting that, despite Republican assurances about what was to be done for labor, nothing has happened.

FAIR AWARDS OF SCHOOL BOARD FEES PROMISED

Secretary-Treasurer to Show No Favoritism If Insurance Plan Is Approved.

Brokerage fees on Board of Education Insurance will be distributed among insurance brokers without favoritism on an equitable rotation basis, if the board approves a recent recommendation for handling its insurance program, Mervyn E. Wiethaupt, board secretary-treasurer, said today.

This recommendation, approved Tuesday by the board's insurance committee, would give Wiethaupt specific authority to direct the board insurance program.

It did not say specifically how brokerage fees—which now amount to about $15,000 annually but may rise considerably soon—were to be handled.

Wiethaupt said he would ask for some directive from the board on this point. If no such guidance is provided by board members when the committee recommendation is presented for approval at the board meeting March 13.

If the committee program is approved, he said, "no brokers will get any special consideration" whether their names are proposed to him by board members or by anyone else.

Certain Brokers Named. The Post-Dispatch has reported that Charles J. Dyer, chairman of the board insurance committee, last year began directing Wiethaupt to name certain brokers, including state Senators, to receive the fees. Dyer also asked at least five other board members whether they had names of brokers to suggest.

Wiethaupt said he did not feel that political office-holders should be necessarily excluded from receiving fees. Nor, he added, should they receive fees because of their office.

The sole basis should be whether a broker is fully qualified and generally accepted as a good insurance man by the insurance industry, he went on.

With this object in mind, the secretary-treasurer said, he would try to obtain a list of competent brokers from St. Louis insurance associations and exclude any person from receiving fees whose name did not appear there.

He said he hoped insurance groups might agree to work out some sort of rotation system, so that the fees could be widely and fairly distributed. Failing this, he remarked he probably would draw up some kind of rotation system himself, based on a list of competent brokers.

'Advice and Counsel.' The recommendation which would give Wiethaupt authority to direct the insurance program states that he is to do so "with the advice and counsel" of the board president and vice president. It would not require him to obtain formal approval of these officers.

Another committee recommendation calls for the insurance of all school buildings against loss from fire or other damage, under $100,000 deductible type policies.

Wiethaupt said that if this receives board approval he will proceed at once to obtain insurance coverage for the schools, which with one exception are not now insured. He also would propose that the schools be appraised and that a determination be made as to what kind of valuation is to be used for insurance purposes, he said.

SCHOOLBOY'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL, JURY FINDS

A verdict of accident was returned today at a coroner's inquest into the fatal injury of Robert Konczakowski, an 11-year-old pupil at Nativity Catholic School, 5827 Harney avenue. The boy died Wednesday at Christian Hospital of a head injury he suffered Tuesday while playing at school.

Robert was taken home immediately following the accident, but not admitted to the hospital until the next day, after he complained of increasing pains in the head.

Funeral services for the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Konczakowski, 5505A Wren avenue, will be at 9 a.m. Monday at Nativity Catholic Church, Oriole and Harney avenues. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

CLAYTON BEGINS PLANTING 700 SHADE, FLOWER TREES

Planting of about 700 shade and flowering trees was started in Clayton today in a city beautification plan. More than 400 will be planted in two parkway areas and the rest will be used to replace dead and diseased trees along other streets.

One hundred saplings of the small flowering variety, such as dogwood, magnolia and peach, are being placed along a one-mile strip of parkway in Wydown boulevard between the eastern city limits and Hanley, and on the DeMun avenue parkway between Wydown and Northwood avenue, a distance of about four blocks.

The trees are being planted by the Clayton Street Department and total cost is expected to be about $18,000.

SAINTS BLOOD REPORTED LIQUEFYING OFF SCHEDULE

NAPLES, Italy, March 2 (AP)—The blood of St. Gennarius liquefied off schedule yesterday, causing the Neapolitan faithful to wonder what the omen meant.

The blood of the martyred Roman Catholic saint, kept in a silver phial in the Naples Cathedral, is supposed to liquefy the first Saturday in May and on Sept. 19. When it does, the faithful believe it is a sign of coming good times. When it doesn't, ill luck is said to be foreshadowed for Naples.

Yesterday the blood was observed to be liquefying, church authorities reported. It was the first time in local memory the blood has been known to do that so far in advance of—or behind—the proper dates.

FAMOUS OLD BATTLESHIP TO MAKE ITS FINAL CRUISE

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—A once-famous battleship of Theodore Roosevelt's "great white fleet" will go on its final cruise at the end of this week. Commissioned in 1901, the Prairie State, originally the Illinois, sailed around the world in 1907 as part of the "great white fleet." In 1924, it lost its guns, superstructure and engines and was converted into a floating armory for the New York State naval militia.

In 1941, it became the Prairie State when another Illinois was commissioned. The final voyage will be from a Manhattan pier to Bayonne, N.J. It may be turned into a floating museum, or scrapped, the Navy said yesterday.

PLANE CONCERN CHARGED MILLION FOR ADS TO NAVY

'Abuse of Taxpayers' Money' by Chance Vought, Congressman Says at Hearing.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (UP)—House Investigators disclosed today that Chance Vought Aircraft, Inc., Dallas, Tex., charged more than $1,000,000 of advertising among costs on Navy plane contracts.

"That is certainly an abuse of the taxpayers' money," Representative Paul Cunningham (Rep., Iowa), told Chance Vought's president, F. O. Detweiler.

Vice President N. V. Turney told the House armed services investigating subcommittee that the advertising, over a four-year period, was an "insignificant item" in comparison to the $167,000,000 in plane sales against which it was charged.

He said advertising represented only 48 hundredths of one per cent of costs.

"You can use percentage figures to prove anything," said Chairman Edward Hebert (Dem., Louisiana). "Dollars-wise, it still amounts to $1,000,000."

Hebert said that Boeing Airplane Co., Seattle, Wash., had testified that the Air Force disallowed similar advertising charges.

Ex-Navy Men Hired.

Testimony also revealed that Chance Vought has a retired admiral and a retired Navy captain on its payroll. Detweiler said neither had anything to do with sales to the Government.

The two are R. Adm. H. B. Sallada, executive vice president, who drew $30,000 in salary plus $5,000 in bonus in 1954 and $35,000 salary and $14,000 bonus last year, and Capt. D. N. Logan, Sallada's administrative assistant, who drew $11,000 in salary in 1954. (Logan's salary for 1955 was not available.)

"Gen. MacArthur said that old soldiers never die, they just fade away," remarked Representative Leon H. Gavin (Rep., Pennsylvania). "But he didn't say where they faded to."

"It would seem to me that they faded into the presidency and vice presidency of aircraft corporations," said Gavin, a former infantry sergeant.

Previous testimony disclosed that Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp., Hagerstown, Md., had six retired admirals and generals on the payroll.

By the Associated Press.

Republic Aviation Corp. officials said they still had not been told how much profit they will be allowed on $1,777,000,000 worth of sales to the government since 1951.

Treasurer Thomas Davis told the subcommittee this is the amount of sales still under renegotiation. In concluding contracts for military aircraft the government normally provides for a price to be set after manufacturing is underway, but each contract is subject to adjustment if it is found that profits were excessive or that items the government does not consider justified costs were included.

Davis agreed generally with Hebert that the company had been unable to operate profitably in the years when it relied on commercial sales of aircraft and had made its profits when it was what Hebert called "a Government operation." Last year 99.9 per cent of Republic's sales were to the armed services, Davis said that, still subject to renegotiation, Republic's profits after taxes for the past seven years totaled $46,123,000, of which the company used more than three quarters "for new and improved facilities, tools to work with and operating capital."

Republic listed these salary and profit sharing payments for 1955: President M. L. Peale, $87,464 and $20,000; Vice Presidents W. G. Bain, $63,185 and $14,000; L. L. Brabham, $27,458 and $18,800; K. Ellington, $24,367 and $9,000; A. Kartveli, $26,053 and no bonus; T. A. Murphy, $15,000 and $12,000; J. J. Ryan, $35,113 and $12,100; M. F. Scanlon, $20,000 and $11,400; Davis, $40,859 and $12,000; Secretary J. A. Thompson, $20,000 and $4,500; Assistant Secretaries and Treasurers H. C. Fillman, $18,500 and $8,700, and M. G. Veckman, $18,500 and $9,600.

TWO HELD IN KIRKWOOD CHARGED WITH MURDER

Two men charged with the murder of Leonard L. Moore, a Cape Girardeau fruit peddler, were held at Kirkwood city jail for Wayne county authorities today after their arrest here yesterday by St. Louis police and State Highway Patrol officers.

Warrants for first-degree murder were issued in Greenville against Bobby Robbins of Grassy, Mo., and Robert Dorsey Sr. of Hiram, Mo. A third man was held here as a material witness, while Earl H. Western of Hiram was held in Greenville on a murder charge after signing a statement confessing his part in the crime.

Moore was found Sunday wandering in a dazed condition, clad only in a shirt, on State Highway 34, near Clubb, Mo. He died Tuesday of a skull fracture without regaining full consciousness. Wayne County Prosecuting Attorney Roy W. McGhee Jr. said Western admitted he hit Moore with his fist outside a tavern near Patterson, Mo., and watched Dorsey and Robbins beat him with an oak board and a hammer. They later divided $50 they took from Moore, Western confessed.

LAST OF FUGITIVE RED LEADERS TO GIVE SELF UP

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—Henry Winston, last of the fugitive top leaders of American Communism, announced last night that he will surrender for imprisonment Monday.

He followed the same formula used by Gilbert Green who surrendered last Monday—addressing his notice in a letter to newspapers.

Green and Winston, both under sentences of five years in prison for revolutionary conspiracy, were among four top Reds who fled in 1951 rather than go to prison.

The other two, Gus Hall and Robert G. Thompson, later were seized by the FBI.

The four were among 11 top American Communist leaders convicted in 1949 of conspiring to teach and advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government.

BENSON HIRED FIRM NAMED IN ANTI-TRUST SUIT

Senator Humphrey Raps Use of Advertising Agency Listed as Co-Conspirator.

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR

The New York Times News Service, (Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, March 2 — Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.), Minnesota, yesterday questioned the propriety of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson accepting the services of a public relations firm named as a co-conspirator in a federal antitrust suit.

Humphrey told the Senate that Braun & Co. of Los Angeles had been named in a federal information filed against Safeway Stores, Inc., last year. The Department of Justice information alleged restraint of trade against Safeway Stores in Texas and New Mexico. Braun & Co. is public relations counsel for Safeway.

He also asserted that the Republican National Committee committed an "act of highly questionable propriety" in retaining for "the purpose of publicizing and popularizing one Cabinet officer a firm which is facing serious charges from another Cabinet officer." Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr.

Spokesmen for the committee and Benson said they did not know of the settlement against Safeway Stores.

The committee spokesman said that a 90-day agreement with Braun & Co. expired Tuesday. He said the company was hired last Dec. 1 for 90 days to advise Benson on speeches and other public appearances in connection with the Administration's new farm proposals.

"This is a shocking thing," Humphrey said. "I don't know how busy our special committee on lobbying is going to be, but this is something that needs to be looked into."

The new attack followed Humphrey's suggestion that the Senate's lobbying committee inquire into what he charged was Benson's efforts to influence southern Senators to vote against rigid Federal farm price supports in return for concessions on cotton supports.

The farm bill before the Senate would restore rigid price props on cotton, corn, wheat, peanuts and rice. They came under a flexible price support system last year. The Administration blames rigid supports for helping to create surplus production of farm commodities.

By the Associated Press

A Justice Department official said Braun & Co. was named as a "co-conspirator" in the case, but was not made a defendant nor was it indicted.

Humphrey said two of Benson's former executive assistants came from the Safeway organization and one of his special consultants was a San Francisco manager for the Braun agency.

BIG-STORE SALES LAST WEEK 6 PCT. ABOVE 1955 LEVEL

St. Louis area department store sales increased 6 per cent in dollar volume last week compared with the corresponding week a year ago, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported today.

For the four-week period ended last Saturday, St. Louis area department store sales increased 5 per cent over those of the corresponding period in 1955. Cumulative sales since Jan. 1 were up 4 per cent in dollar volume over the same 1955 period.

Sales rose 8 per cent in the Eighth Federal Reserve District as a whole last week over the similar period a year ago and were 6 per cent higher in the four weeks ending Saturday over a year ago.

Department store sales nationally were 4 per cent higher last week than in the corresponding week of 1955.

FRANKLIN AVENUE THEATER BEING RAZED, BUILT IN 1916

Wrecking operations began yesterday on the building at 1310 Franklin avenue, built in 1916 as the Palace Theater and known in recent years as the Carver Theater. The lot is to be used for parking space.

The Palace was one of the early silent film motion picture houses in St. Louis and included vaudeville entertainment. It changed ownership and name in 1933, becoming the Globe Theater. In 1943 it was named for the famous Negro scientist and educator, George Washington Carver, according to Dr. William G. Swekosky, a local dentist whose hobby is the study of old buildings in the area.

Under the latter name it remained in operation until recently when it was bought by Eight Hundred North Twelfth Street Inc. The lot is to be used for Monsanto Chemical Co. employees at 800 North Twelfth boulevard. Razing operations, by the Acme Wrecking & Excavating Co., are expected to be completed in about 10 days.

NAVY SEEKS 205 RECRUITS

The Navy's St. Louis Recruiting Station has been assigned a quota of 205 enlistments for March. It was announced today by Lt. Cmdr. L. R. Wright, U.S.N., officer in charge. The February quota was 290, and more than 70 per cent of it was filled, station personnel said.

The Navy's high school graduate training program will remain in effect during March, Cmdr. Wright said. Graduates who qualify are sent to a specialized service school on completion of recruit training.

DOWD HAD TAPE DEVICE IN STORE, DRUGGIST SAYS

Also Had Investigator There to Check 'Pay-offs,' Owner Testifies.

Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd assigned an investigator and placed a tape recorder in a drug store at 4398A Chouteau avenue which played a key role in the inquiry into reported pay-offs to some policemen by brothel operators, James E. Davidson, store owner, testified today.

Davidson testified in Circuit Judge J. Casey Walsh's court at a hearing attacking the validity of indictments charging Detective Capt. William Greenspan and Cpl. George R. Wood with accepting bribes from operators of disorderly houses.

In the early stages of the investigation, Davidson identified himself as the business man Mrs. Ethel Clift, brothel operator, said she used as her intermediary in the alleged pay-offs. Mrs. Clift lived near his store, and frequently visited it.

Davidson said Dowd sent a police officer from his office to the store to maintain a vigil during store hours. "He would arrive when we opened in the morning and not leave until we closed at night," he said.

Willing to Help. Dowd requested permission of Davidson to put the tape recorder in the store, Davidson said, adding, "I would do anything to help him."

At one time, Davidson said, Dowd asked him to take a lie-detector test. He refused. At another time, the witness said, Dowd asked to see the records of his business. This also was refused. Davidson was called to the circuit attorney's office "10 or 12 times" and questioned for as long as two hours at a time, he said.

Dowd's office said at the time the indictments were voted against Greenspan, Wood and Lt. F. Lyman Davis that the intermediary turned over to Davis envelopes with two $150 payments in behalf of Mrs. Clift. Davidson has declined to discuss that matter.

Judge Criticizes Dowd. Joseph L. Forrest, a member of the September term grand jury which carried the brunt of the pay-off investigation, testified yesterday that Dowd accused him of being prejudiced.

Forrest, manager of an optical firm, said Dowd accused him of being antagonistic to witnesses after Forrest had questioned one woman concerning the economics of brothel operations.

"I thought I was doing right," Forrest said, "when I asked her about profit and loss figures. But Mr. Dowd said to me: 'You're antagonistic to this witness. You're prejudiced. You've already made up your mind.'"

Told About Trips. Answering a question from Greenspan's and Wood's attorney, Morris A. Shenker, Forrest said on numerous occasions he heard Dowd tell the grand jurors that policemen were always running out to Las Vegas on vacations and driving expensive automobiles on their small salaries.

Charles F. Ford, foreman of the grand jury and a partner in the A. G. Edwards & Sons brokerage firm, testified that Dowd threatened to "clean out" the police department and "planted answers in the mouths" of witnesses before the grand jury.

Forrest when questioned concerning the "planting of answers to questions," said: "I don't know whether the answers were supplied, but I didn't like the way some of the questions were phrased by Dowd. I had been asked not to cross-question some of the witnesses too hard."

Looked for Microphone. Mrs. Blanche L. Tucker, Negro, also a member of the jury, testified she could not substantiate Ford's testimony. Another juror, Mrs. Charles L. Summersby, said Ford had told her he suspected there was a hidden microphone in the grand jury room. Ford told her he had looked under tables and chairs for a hidden microphone, but found none. She said she suggested he look in the ceiling. He told her the ceiling was so high he could not get up there, she said.

On cross examination, Ford denied he had obtained an agreement with other grand jurors that no indictments would be returned. He admitted he gave some police officers $10 to $20 at Christmas time "for no particular reason except when you have a good year you want to share your good fortune."

Ford also acknowledged that his investment firm carried the accounts of Greenspan and Wood and other officers under investigation.

MEATCUTTERS TO ENFORCE CLAUSE ON PRE-PACKAGES

A provision in the Meatcutters Union contract which would prevent retail markets in St. Louis and St. Louis county from handling pre-packaged meat, fish and poultry items not handled by the markets prior to Oct. 2, 1950, will be enforced, Nicholas J. Blassie, head of Local 88, said today.

Blassie contended that the increased pre-packaging of such items by packing houses has caused a decrease in at least 100 jobs for union meatcutters in the St. Louis area. Similar clauses have been included in contracts with retail markets since 1950 but were not strictly enforced, he said.

"Now it has come to a degree where it is really hurting us," Blassie asserted. "We are insisting on enforcement now." A spokesman for the packers and a representative of the retail stores said the situation as affecting their operations has not become clearly defined.

IN CITY TRAFFIC where tensions usually mount, Chrysler's cat-like flexibility brings a wonderful sense of calm. And those admiring glances confirm your judgment that this is America's biggest fine car buy.

THEY'LL THINK YOU PAID $1,000 MORE

CHRYSLER SETS NEW SPEED MARK!

Wins Daytona "Flying Mile" at 139.373 m. p. h.

A Chrysler 300-B swept the 1956 NASCAR Speed Trial Championships at Daytona Beach with a sand-scoring "Flying Mile" average speed of 139.373 m.p.h. Shocked competition, watched as Chrysler barreled down the beach... topping last year's stock car record (also set by Chrysler) by 12 m.p.h.

Head the new Chrysler Windsor V-8 in any direction and start making comparisons. The only cars you can compare it with are the other luxury cars... because that's what the Chrysler Windsor is. But you can own this car for the cost of a medium-priced car! And at this price, the only year-ahead car simply defies comparison.

Take the way it handles in city traffic. Something quite strange and wonderful happens. Instead of feeling tense, you're utterly relaxed—thanks to Chrysler's Full-time Power Steering and a host of brand new Chrysler exclusives. You're guiding a big, powerful car that responds like a mind reader. Your Chrysler handles every traffic situation with liquid deftness, beautifully balanced between the forward thrust of its mighty airplane-type engine and the most powerful brakes in the industry. This car flows!

Yet, if you can afford any car in the medium-priced field, you can afford to step up to a Chrysler Windsor V-8. Come in and drive this car. Compare its year-ahead new car features with the other leading cars in its price class. We think you'll agree that it looks and acts like a car that costs $1,000 more than it does!

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 2 (AP)—A dance band drummer admitted yesterday he killed a rival for the affections of a blond strip-tease dancer.

Charles Joseph Bernstein was shot to death in his hotel room last Aug. 15. Mighetto said he quarreled with Bernstein over Mrs. Wynell Bettis.

HOUSE APPROVES UPPER COLORADO RIVER PROJECT

Bill Omits Echo Park Dam Which Caused Controversy When Included by Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (UP)—The House passed and returned to the Senate yesterday a bill providing for construction of the Upper Colorado River project.
The bill went to a Senate-House conference after the Senate refused to accept the House version.

Named to represent the Senate were Senators Clinton Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico; Henry M. Jackson (Dem.), Washington; Joseph O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming; Eugene Miliken (Rep.), Colorado and Arthur V. Watkins (Rep.), Utah. The House conferees have not been chosen.

The measure, endorsed by President Eisenhower, was approved in the House on a roll-call vote, 256 to 136.

As authorized in the House bill the project would cost $750,000,000 compared to a billion as provided in a bill passed by the Senate last year.

Target of Criticism.
The House bill eliminates the Echo Park dam in Dinosaur National Park in Colorado. The dam, included in the Senate bill, was the target of widespread criticism by conservationists.

The House bill provides for construction of the Glen Canyon dam in northern Arizona; the Flaming Gorge dam in Utah; the Navajo dam in New Mexico and the Curecanti dam in Colorado. Construction of the Curecanti dam was conditioned on further surveys and findings of the Interior Department's Reclamation Bureau.

The measure also would provide for participating projects which would irrigate 132,000 acres of new land and supply additional water to 234,000 acres of land now under irrigation.

To Restrict Surplus Crops.

Before passage the House accepted an amendment by Representative William H. Avery (Rep.), Kansas, providing that for the first 10 years after enactment no water for newly-irrigated land could be used to produce farm crops in surplus supply.

The House rejected by voice vote an amendment offered by Representative James Roosevelt (Dem.), California, to provide that none of the water impounded by the dams could be used for production of power.

The Glen Canyon dam would be primarily for power production. Roosevelt said he wanted to settle the dispute between those who wanted dams solely for power and those who wanted dams for irrigation purposes.

Change Rejected.

Also rejected by voice vote was an amendment by Representative John P. Saylor (Rep.), Pennsylvania, to give the upper basin states $421,270,000 from the federal treasury to build their own dams. Saylor said this would be the "biggest give-away of all," and at the same time "be the cheapest thing for the Government."

The controversial bill had been hotly debated for two days with most of the opposition coming from southern California members who claimed that the project would take water and power away from their section of the state.

Earlier Representative Chet Holifield (Dem.), California, charged that the project "represents the biggest give-away of all time."

BOLIVIAN TIN MINERS RAID ARMY CENTER, SEIZE ARMS

LA PAZ, March 2 (AP)—Press reports said yesterday that a group of tin miners raided Bolivian army headquarters at Challapata Wednesday and seized small arms and ammunition.
The few soldiers at the headquarters offered no resistance and no casualties were reported. No explanation was given for the raid.

Tuesday the Government announced that it would hire a foreigner as general manager of the Bolivian Mining Corp. which manages Bolivia's nationalized tin mines. Government officials have expressed displeasure over the failure of the nationalized tin industry to meet production goals.

PARTIES 'TIE-UP' ON IDLE STATE FUNDS ALLEGED

A "tie-up" existing between the present Republican and Democratic party leadership in Missouri permits continuance of the practice under which idle state funds do not earn interest, Joseph M. Whealen, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Governor, charged last night.

Whealen, in a talk before the Thirteenth Ward Republican Club at 4264 Delor street, said: "How in the world can our leadership renounce the Democrats so long as it fills its personal pockets due to the generosity of the Democratic powers?"

The manner in which the Missouri penitentiary was operated under the administration of Gov. Phil M. Donnelly led to the destructive prisoner riots of 1954, Whealen said.

ALL - MILITARY AIRPORT CALLED GOOD INSURANCE

Naval Air Station Commander Says Commercial Planes Could Use It in Emergency.

A separate airport near here, primarily for military flying, would provide "invaluable and cheap insurance" for Lambert-St. Louis Field since commercial planes could use it in an emergency, the commanding officer of the Naval Air Station said today.

The officer, Capt. Clayton L. Miller, added that it would be a "tremendous advantage" to have available an emergency field without any cost to St. Louis of construction, maintenance or operation.

"Such a field is justified for St. Louis, and planning should be undertaken without delay," he said in a statement. "It is earnestly hoped that construction for this field will be urged by conscientious citizens in whatever way their influence may be felt."

The Navy's relations with Lambert authorities have been excellent, Capt. Miller said, but he noted that "it must be recognized that we represent different philosophies of flying and are in competition for the same facilities."

Not everyone recognizes that commercial planes interfere with military planes as well as the other way around, he said. A special three-man committee of the St. Louis County Council has undertaken a survey of the problem, with two members already favoring an all-military airport.

The councilmen appointed to make the study—to embrace "the entire situation"—are James H. J. McNary and Thomas C. Dunne, Democrats, and Frank L. Martini, Republican.

McNary and Dunne said at the outset they considered a military field advisable, and Martini said he thought the idea was worth investigation.

MEXICO'S GROSS PRODUCTION INCREASED 6.6 PCT. IN 1955
MEXICO CITY, March 2 (AP)—Treasury Secretary Antonio Carrillo Flores reported yesterday that Mexico's national gross production in 1955 amounted to 84,000,000,000 pesos ($6,720,000,000) up 6.6 per cent from 1954.

In a report to stockholders of the Bank of Mexico, he gave these other statistics for last year: farm production was up 10 per cent, manufacturing production was up 10.8 per cent, exports increased 23 per cent over 1954 to reach a new record.

LOAN MAN TELLS OF SIGNING PAPER HE DIDN'T READ

Ex-President of Jefferson Co. Testifies He Approved Affidavit on Lawyer's Advice.

Testimony in the trial of two former officers of the Jefferson Loan Co. on charges of using the mail to defraud was completed today in the court of United States District Judge Ruben M. Hulen.

Vernon F. Neubauer, former president of the firm, testified that he had signed an affidavit which was produced as one of the Government exhibits, but had not read it in detail. In it he said he had "erroneously failed" to charge off $959,000 in losses in two 12-month periods.

Neubauer said he signed the affidavit after an attorney employed by the owner of the company, Joseph Mitchell, advised him the arrangement was proper and would provide certain tax advantages to the firm. He said he considered the accounts involved collectible at the time he signed the affidavit.

In many cases, Neubauer said, loans were made on equipment of borrowing companies and if they were foreclosed would have shut off the means by which the companies could make the money to pay the loans. The Jefferson Loan Co. in such cases frequently "carried these accounts along," and sometimes made loans to tide the borrowers over rough spots in their business, he said.

At the close of the Government's case, Judge Hulen sustained defense motions to dismiss two of the four counts of the indictment on grounds testimony had failed to show audit reports, which the Government contends were false, had been mailed to two of the banks.

These counts involved Manchester Bank of St. Louis, to which Jefferson Loan Co. allegedly owed $75,000, and National Stockyards National Bank of National City, Ill., to which it allegedly owed $375,000.

Remaining counts involve Mutual Bank and Trust Co. of St. Louis and American Trust Co. of New York. In each case the loan company allegedly owed $150,000.

Charged with Neubauer is Marion F. Langenberg, former accountant for the company. Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were filed against the loan company, 818 Olive street, by three banks in 1952.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mildred M. Proetz; two daughters, Mrs. O. F. Oldendorph and Mrs. N. A. Faulkner; a son, Bernard G. Proetz, Jr.; two brothers, Walter and Charles Proetz; and a sister, Mrs. Wendell Blanton.

STRATTON ASKED TO QUALIFY SUMMERFIELD FOR U.S. AID

Gov. William G. Stratton of Illinois was asked to reconsider his refusal to designate tornado-damaged Summerfield as a disaster area in telegrams sent to Springfield yesterday by two St. Clair county legislators.

State Senator James W. Gray of East St. Louis and State Representative Alan J. Dixon of Belleville, both Democrats, urged the Governor to call for federal disaster aid to the stricken St. Clair county community.

The tornado, which struck Summerfield last Saturday, caused damage estimated by state authorities at $656,000. Gray and Dixon said only about 35 per cent of the damage was covered by insurance.

4 CANADIAN JETS COLLIDE IN FRANCE, 3 PILOTS KILLED

STRASBOURG, France, March 2 (UPI)—Four Royal Canadian Air Force jet fighter planes collided in a close formation dive and crashed near here today. Three of the pilots were killed and the fourth is missing.

Canadian air division officials said the four F-86 Sabrejets were from the No. 4 fighter wing based at Baden Soellingen, Germany. They crashed at 3 p.m. in an area 25 miles south of Strasbourg.

RING IN COLLEGE TO STUDY TO BE 'BIG TIME GANGSTERS'

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 2 (UPI)—Disturbed parents of students studying to be "big time gangsters" met with University of Kentucky officials today on the ring's alleged thefts, bombings and narcotics sales on campus.

Ten students and two outside youths were arrested yesterday in a pre-dawn raid on three university dormitories.

The arrests climaxed a long investigation by the university and federal narcotics agents, including one who posed as a student and lived with a gang member.

Since enrollment last September, the gang was alleged to have exploded several homemade bombs in university dormitories, participated in 31 campus thefts, robbed stores in downtown Lexington and sold marijuana on the campus.

The estate of Miss Augusta Schlossstein, a member of an old St. Louis family who died Jan. 27 at the age of 83, was valued at $242,701 in an inventory filed today in probate court.

Bulk of the estate was in diversified corporate stocks. The inventory listed stocks valued at $208,299; bonds, $12,986; cash, $18,481; and goods

ALDERMEN RECEIVE $99,900 FUND BILL

It Would Be for Operating City Departments Until April 9.

An emergency appropriation bill providing $99,900 for operation of city departments for the rest of the fiscal year, which ends April 9, was introduced at a meeting of the Board of Aldermen today.

The bill, introduced by Alderman Edgar J. Feely (Dem.), Twenty-first Ward, contained its largest items sums of $25,000 for the law department to pay for judgments against the city, an additional $17,000 for coal, and an item of $12,000 for judgments in the water division.

The board voted to instruct its ways and means committee to study the proposal to contract for janitorial services for the new terminal building at Lambert-St. Louis Field. Validity of the contract has been questioned by Personnel Director R. Elliott Searey, who contends it would violate civil service provisions of the city's charter.

City Counselor Samuel H. Liberman ruled today that the contract as drawn is legal, since the Municipal Airport Commission is authorized to operate the airport under a Missouri statute. His ruling said the legality of the contract was not free from doubt, however, although it was declared to be legal "under the particular circumstances existing."

A resolution asking Conway B. Briscoe, director of public utilities, to use all available means to relieve the critical condition of street lighting in the city brought about by the damp weather, was passed by the board. Hundreds of street lights have failed during recent weeks.

Alderman Carl W. Guetschow (Rep.), Twenty-third Ward, introduced a bill to reduce from 18 inches to 10 inches the height of weeds on private property at which point the Park Commissioner can request the owner to cut them, or enter the property and bill the owner for the job if he fails to comply.

A bill was introduced by Board President Donald Gunn which would empower the Traffic Commissioner to authorize officials of any school to close off temporarily portions of streets adjacent to the school for the purpose of protecting the children. Uniform regulations on the matter would be issued by the commissioner.

Traffic signals at Compton and Lafayette avenues and Compton and Park avenues would be authorized in another bill introduced today.

HERMANN FREED IN SHARP KILLING AT SECOND TRIAL

are in immediate need of medical attention."

When Morris demanded the name of the complainant, Arthur B. Shepley Jr., marshal of Ladue, spoke up from the crowd surrounding Hermann saying: "You don't have to answer that, Jim."

Thank you, Mr. Shepley. I thought you were behind this," Morris replied.

The 24-year-old prisoner was taken to St. Louis County Hospital where Dr. Curtis H. Lohr, hospital superintendent, attended without success to question both Hermann and his mother, Mrs. Marguerite Hermann. Both declined to answer any questions.

Dr. Lohr then had Lt. Walter Haller of the Ladue police make an application for Hermann's confinement until an examination could be made to determine whether he was sane enough to remain at large.

The law under which the police acted was passed last year by the Legislature. It provides that any health or police officer may take an individual into custody if there is reason to believe he is mentally ill and therefore likely to injure himself or others if allowed to remain at large. An examination by a licensed physician is required within five days after the arrest.

Haller's Statement.

In the application, Lt. Haller stated it was his belief that Hermann was in danger to himself and others.

"I have observed Thomas P. Hermann over a period of 10 years increasingly committing acts of violence," Haller's statement continued. "I have had reports of his being completely uncommunicative while incarcerated in the St. Louis County Jail in recent months."

Morris charged the detention of his client was a case of false arrest, insisting that any action to restrain Hermann because of his alleged mental condition should have been initiated in probate court. Hermann was once adjudged insane by the probate court and was committed to the State Hospital at Fairview from Dec. 20, 1950, to April 5, 1951. Though released, he never has been declared sane officially by the probate court.

Declaring his client should now be presumed sane, Morris announced he probably would file a motion in Probate Court for a declaration restoring Hermann's sanity.

Taken to Sanitarium.

After Dr. Lohr approved the application, Hermann was taken to Glenwood Sanitarium in St. Louis county where the county's mental patients are placed for observation.

The verdict was greeted with both smiles and tears by members of the defendant's family, who had kept up a long vigil at the courthouse throughout the jury's deliberations. Hermann was embraced by his mother and by his younger sister, Ann, and older brother, James. Thomas Hermann smiled briefly but had little to say. All of the family thanked the members of the jury and shook hands with each of them.

Mrs. Hermann told the Post-Dispatch she had been confident her son would be found not guilty and had constantly prayed for his acquittal.

At the trial this week, young Sharp testified Hermann was the man he saw with a weapon in his hand, about six feet from the doorway of the Sharp home when the physician was killed. The witness said he had known Hermann since 1950 when the Sharps built a home adjoining the Hermann property on Clayton road.

The defense showed that at the inquest Coroner Arnold Willmann had asked young Sharp if he could identify "the man with the gun." The answer was "no." The witness then was asked if he was acquainted with Hermann and replied: "I cannot say it was him."

Cecil Sharp said he hesitated to identify Hermann on advice of counsel and after being told by Ladue police the night of the shooting not to talk to reporters. Mrs. Sharp testified that Cecil told her the night of the shooting: "Tom Hermann is out there."

Thomas Hermann did not take the stand in his defense, but his mother, brother and sister testified he did not leave their home the night Dr. Sharp was killed. Members of the Hermann family said they played cards and had the radio turned on loud, apparently in explanation of why the Sharps reported hearing loud voices outside.

Hermann's previous conviction and sentence had been reversed by the Missouri Supreme Court after it was discovered the foreman of the jury that heard that case had failed to disclose his conviction by a federal court of a felony.

Hermann had been confined to the Missouri Penitentiary on the St. Louis county jail since his first conviction, bail having been denied.

NEW MO. PAC. BOARD HOLDS FIRST MEETING

President—Other Officers of Company
Also Chosen.

The new board of directors of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. met today in the company's headquarters, Thirteenth and Olive streets, to take the first formal steps beginning private operation of the company after its long career under a bankruptcy trustee.

One of the directors' first acts was election of Paul J. Neff as president. He had served since 1946 as chief executive officer for the trustee. Other officers elected were H. M. Johnson, executive vice president; Russell L. Dearmont, vice president and general counsel; C. D. Peet, vice president in charge of accounting and finance; F. E. Bates, vice president; H. P. Hart, vice president for operations; H. L. Schaeffer, vice president for traffic; C. A. Rockwell, secretary; E. G. Wagner, treasurer; and T. T. Bailey, general solicitor.

All officers except Bates are St. Louisans. Bates has been serving in Houston as executive assistant in charge of the Texas-Louisiana lines. All officers will perform the same general duties they discharged during receivership.

Neff expressed optimism over the future of the newly reorganized road. He pointed out it operated in the west-southwestern territory that has undergone rapid industrial development since the war, and said the $324,000,000 the railroad has spent on rehabilitation in the last 10 years had given it facilities needed to give area.

The 15 directors, selected by Trustee Guy A. Thompson from nominees submitted by the various security holders and creditors and approved by United States District Judge George H. Moore, were constituted formally by the board of reorganization managers.

New directors, in addition to Neff, are: Robert W. Otto, Arthur A. Blumeyer, James Lee Johnson and Harry B. Matthews, all of St. Louis; Isaac B. Grainger, New York banker; Robert B. Anderson, New York, president of Ventures Limited; Robert H. Craft, president-elect of the Chase National Bank; New York; James M. Kemper, banker, Kansas City, Mo.; William B. Bates, Houston (Tex.) lawyer; Herbert Gussman, independent oil producer of Tulsa, Okla.; and Gus S. Wortham, Houston industrialist; T. C. Davis, New York, director of various companies and member of the board of reorganization managers; and E. M. Black, New York, board chairman and chief executive officer of American Seal-Kap Corp.

The present company, representing an amalgamation with 23 of its subsidiaries operating 9710 miles of main line track in nine states, came into being yesterday in an order issued by Judge Moore ending bankruptcy proceedings that began March 31, 1933.

A last-minute petition by a group of bondholders to suspend the final proceedings to permit a request for a United States Supreme Court review of the group's objections to the reorganization plan was overruled by Judge Moore.

The capital of the new concern is about $812,000,000, of which $195,821,535 represents equity capital consisting of 1,917,558 shares of Class A common stock and 40,657 shares of Class B common, each with a stated value of $100 a share. Most of the Class A goes to the old preferred stockholders while the present common stockholders will receive the Class B.

CYPRUS DISPUTE LETTERS ARE TO BE MADE PUBLIC

NICOSIA, Cyprus, March 2 (AP)—Archbishop Makarios, leader of Cyprus's union-with-Greece movement, announced yesterday the correspondence between him and British Gov. Sir John Harding will be published next week.

The two have been negotiating for weeks over the future of this British-ruled east Mediterranean island. Greek-descended Cypriots have been agitating violently for the right of self-determination that would lead to union with Greece.

The Archbishop's announcement followed the departure of British Colonial Secretary Alan Lennox-Boyd, who had been here since Sunday conferring with British and Cypriot leaders. The British minister flew to Malta for conferences on the future status of that island.

Informal sources said Lennox-Boyd rejected Makarios's demand that any Cyprus legislative assembly have a Greek-elected majority with the right to vote for self-determination.

BRAZIL LANDSLIDE KILLS AT LEAST 40 AND INJURES 100

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 2 (AP)—A landslide has killed an estimated 40 to 50 persons and injured 100 in Santos, Brazil's biggest coffee port and a city of 200,000 population.

A cloudburst loosened the earth on a hill and sent the landslide crashing down on an area of workers' homes. Ambulances and rescue workers were called in from Sao Paulo, 33 miles away, to help care for the injured and search for victims.

Gov. Janio Quadros of Sao Paulo state accompanied the rescue mission to Santos. He said earlier estimates putting the number of dead at 200 were too high.

POLICIES OF DOWD AND POLICE ARGUED

Lawyers Panel Criticizes and Defends Handling of Suspects.

Methods used by the circuit attorney's office and the police department in handling suspected criminals were criticized and defended last night in a panel discussion sponsored by the Lawyers Association of St. Louis at Hotel DeSoto.

Taking a critical viewpoint were Mark M. Hennelly and Irl Baris, attorneys who often represent defendants in criminal cases. Defending methods used by Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd and police were Herbert Mack, an assistant circuit attorney, and Wayne Bigler, assistant United States Attorney. Wire tapping "should not be permitted under any circumstances because it is basically immoral, and therefore a violation of civil rights," Hennelly asserted.

Equally bad is "entrapping a witness before a grand jury without advising him of his constitutional rights," he said.

Baris said "there is too much emphasis on how many confessions the prosecuting attorney obtains. The rights of the defendant should be given greatest priority."

Baris, referring to the repeated arrests of Isadore Londe, former convict; called for "a civil liberties course for the police department."

Mack declared that the circuit attorney's office has "always appraised a man of his rights," adding: "It is despicable to try to entrap a man before a grand jury."

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Fri., March 2, 1956 3B

lice department makes almost all of the arrests for the federal government. "If the St. Louis police didn't pick up people on suspicion, we would find it difficult to issue warrants," he said.

Circuit Judge John K. Regan was given a plaque by the Lawyers Association in recognition of his service as presiding judge in the civil divisions during the last half of 1955.

ILA TRYING TO REGAIN ITS MEMBERSHIP HERE

Union Which AFL Ousted Has Financial Backing of Teamsters.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 2—The old International Longshoremen's Association, with financial backing of the AFL-CIO Teamsters' Union, will attempt to win back its former membership in St. Louis and other Midwestern centers, spokesmen announced here today.

Thomas (Teddy) Gleason, an organizer for the ILA, which was expelled from the AFL in 1953 on the ground it was gangster-dominated, said ILA charters already have been issued in Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland. Working with the teamsters, the ILA is reported to be in the midst of an organization drive in New Orleans.

The action of Vice President James Hoffa of the Teamsters in engineering an organization pact with the ILA presented George Meaney, president of the AFL-CIO, with his first difficult problem. He has been critical of "corruption on the docks."

In St. Louis, Lawrence W. Long, international president of the new AFL-CIO Brotherhood of Longshoremen, which replaced the ILA in the AFL organization, said he had seen no evidence of the ILA drive here. The more than 1600 longshoremen in this area are solidly with the new union, he said.

Long was a leader of the fight against the ILA and its former president, Joseph P. Ryan, which led up to the ILA's ousted at the AFL's national convention at St. Louis in 1953.

TESTS INDICATE WAYS TO AVOID BEING SEASICK

If you want to avoid being seasick, it helps to be under 25, slightly thin, and traveling amidship on a second or third voyage, investigators reported today.

A study by an Army, Navy and Air Force motion sickness team, reported in the current Journal of the American Medical Association, indicated that one of 11 recently proved drugs might be helpful, too.

For five months, about 17,000 service men were tested on military transports crossings the Atlantic. Ten eastward and five westward crossings were used, with passengers being given unmarked pills which were either drugs or placebos.

The top three drugs of those are named bonamine, phenegan and marenzine. For a long sea voyage, where it might be necessary to use drugs for several days, bonamine seemed to be the best choice, the team said.

SEEKS TO STOP SUPPORTING CHILDREN WHO WORK ON TV

LOS ANGELES, March 2 (AP)—Why should he pay $200 a month alimony and child support, William M. Chapin wanted to know, when his children's television salaries are more than his own?

Seeking to have the payments suspended, Chapin told Superior Judge Elmer D. Doyle yesterday that his son, Billy, 12 years old, earns as much as $1000 a week as a free lance actor. Chapin added that his daughter, Lauren, 10, gets $285 a film as "Kathy" in the "Father Knows Best" television series. Chapin said he makes $460 a month as an insurance executive.

Judge Doyle denied the petition after Mrs. Chapin testified the children's salaries are spasmic and savings clauses in their contracts keep net earnings at a minimum.

JEWELRY THEFT ON LINER SOLVED, LOOT RECOVERED

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2 (AP)—The theft of jewelry from a triple-locked display case aboard the liner Lurline was solved yesterday because a woman was mistreated.

Charged with stealing the jewelry valued at $5180 was John Gregory Leary, former chief electrician aboard the liner. The jewelry was stolen when the Lurline was at sea Feb. 22.

Leary's arrest resulted from a complaint by his Japanese wife, that he had beaten her for the second time within five months—even after having presented her with a jade ring and bracelet, identified as part of the missing jewelry.

Police found other pieces of the jade in possession of two women friends of Leary and at the apartment of the former seaman. All 44 pieces were recovered.

COVINGTON, Ky., March 2 (AP)—The driver of a mud-stuck automobile told police yesterday he must have been "sleep driving." He had no other explanation for the fact he was clad only in underclothes and shoes.

He said he frequently walked in his sleep, but believed this was the first time he had gotten behind the wheel of an auto while snoozing. The man's mother confirmed that he was a sleep-walker.

PRESS COMMENT ON EISENHOWER'S DECISION TO RUN AGAIN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FOLLOWING are excerpts from editorials in leading newspapers in the United States commenting on President Eisenhower's announcement Wednesday that he would seek a second term.

New York Times: . . . of one thing we may be certain. This is his own decision. It is his own decision in the same way that another great decision was his own: the day and hour when, as supreme commander of the Allied forces, he gave the word to strike across the channel. Then, as now, he was subjected to great pressures. Then, as now, the final choice was inescapably his own. This is a man with too stern a conscience to be pressured into great decisions by the importunities of friends and models; a man to be swayed by considerations of prestige or of power. The ability to read the future is not his. He cannot foresee what the next five years may bring. But we can be certain, knowing the man, that when he says that he will run again he does so only because he now believes that he will be able to carry the responsibilities of the presidency if he is re-elected and of serving his country well in that great office.

For the Republican party the issues will be peace and prosperity. In support of this slogan will be marshalled other achievements of the first Eisenhower administration: a foreign policy which continues to stress the necessity of co-operation with our democratic allies overseas; a federal budget at least tentatively brought into balance; a stable cost of living; a freeing of the American economy from the incubus of price controls; a progressive program of legislation (new for the Republican party) in the field of social welfare, health and education; a beginning made, though with little present satisfaction for the subject of the experiment) at digging the American farmer out from under the mountainous surpluses piled up by rigid price supports.

There is cause for deep satisfaction on two grounds: first, that a well-loved President feels his recovery so complete that he is able to make this declaration; and, second, that the Republican party will go into this year's campaign under the leadership of an internationalist and a humanitarian.

New York Herald Tribune: The thanks of millions of Americans, of millions of free men everywhere, will go to President Eisenhower for his decision to allow his name to be put before the Republican national convention for renomination. They know that this decision has not been reached easily, or without much thought, consultation and testing. They know it is selfless, the acceptance of an added burden of responsibility by a man who has already borne much, and borne it with greatness. Above all, they know it is right—for the country and for the free world.

Mr. Eisenhower has said he will campaign on his record. It is not only a record of inspired service and leadership in the field and in the council hall and in the White House, it is a record which, in itself, is sufficient warrant for a second term as President. It is also a record of absolute personal integrity and genuine humility.

The American people have made it known by every test of public opinion that they want the President to run again. This newspaper shares that desire, in the earnest conviction that another four years with Mr. Eisenhower in the White House will be a period of establishing the ideals of progressive liberal government in Washington, in safeguarding a system of free enterprise that is truly free and truly entering into an evolving peace with honor in the world.

New York Journal American: The decision of President Eisenhower to seek re-election has produced, naturally, a great surge of jubilation within the Republican party. But we believe also it is a cause for stimulation and confidence among a great many Americans who are not Republicans but who have come to recognize the President by his achievements as a leader committed absolutely to the best interests of all the people.

And his announcement will be, we feel, a matter for elation of the entire free world. . . . Mr. Eisenhower . . . does not regard himself as indispensable. His reason and modesty shun that peak of egotism. But his lifelong training has been never to leave a task until he has finished it and we are sure this was the compelling motive that moved him in his long and lonely hours of contemplation. We think his decision is of the utmost importance to the nation and the free world.

It is good for the nation because if he is re-elected, it will mean a continuation of the President's policies of moderation and fairness for the welfare of all this country, and it will indicate a continuation of this nation's prosperity.

It is good for the free world because his re-election would mean a carrying forward of his policies of firmness without provocation toward the menace of communism, and his determination to enforce peace without appeasement.

The Hearst newspapers share President Eisenhower's views on Mr. Nixon. For, on the record, Mr. Nixon is a stalwart American. He has become literally the President's right-hand man. There has been perhaps no other Vice President in all our history in whom a President has shown such confidence and invested such authority as President Eisenhower has in Mr. Nixon.

for peace and freedom is confident enough of his health and position to be a candidate for re-election. . . . It would be difficult to argue for confidence in the President. Eisenhower is indispensable to the furtherance of even those policies which his Administration has endorsed. It is no derogation of his abilities to say that the President is not an administrator who excels at handling details; and in domestic matters the details, along with the mistakes that creep into them, have a habit of becoming policy. The stamp of his personality upon the large issues of foreign policy has been more definite. Particularly because the President is trusted and admired as a leader for peace in capitals from London to New Delhi, his presence in foreign affairs has become an important national resource. There is considerably more reason for confidence in the President's own judgment and restraint than in the performance of some of his lieutenants.

It is fair to say also that the almost Olympian detachment which Mr. Eisenhower has conducted himself has been a useful influence for unity both at home and abroad. It has, to be sure, sometimes enabled him to fend off criticism when criticism has been deserved. But Mr. Eisenhower has on many occasions demonstrated his distaste for excessive partisanship. He has infused his office with some of the wisdom of his presidential earnestness in dealing with people, are assets that the country will want to consider.

If it were merely a question of personal popularity, Mr. Eisenhower might now be elected by acclamation. But it is far more than that. Many persons who have the kindest feelings toward him may experience misgivings about his willingness to continue a burden of office that involves risks for him and for the country as well. Others will think the risks worth taking because of the benefits of continuity. The President's policies, Americans will want to consider the risks along with the advantages that Mr. Eisenhower and his colleagues can bring.

The President's policies, Americans will want to consider the risks along with the advantages that Mr. Eisenhower and his colleagues can bring. The President's policies, Americans will want to consider the risks along with the advantages that Mr. Eisenhower and his colleagues can bring.

Washington Star: The big question which emerges is why—why is he doing this? Why does this man, brought down by a heart attack five months ago, want to assume the burdens and the hazards of another term in the White House? The decision is supported by two main considerations. First, he believes that he can continue indefinitely to carry out the essential duties of his office. Otherwise, he would have resigned long ago. The decision to run again, second, he is motivated by a sense of duty.

Scripps-Howard Newspapers: People can stop holding their breath now. Life has said it, he said yes. With dignity and quiet, he laid it on the line. He accepted the role of a recovered heart patient.

There will be many issues in the coming campaign. But the talking issue, to most folks, will be like's physical condition—how he can carry on with that undetachable desk strapped to his back. That endless golf, always with him—on the golf course, at the supper table, wherever he is.

He feels fit for the task. It does not burden him. His doctors reassure him. He spoke frankly about it. Never before has a nation's leader talked so candidly about his own physical condition—what he can do, what his doctors admonish, how he proposes to live and work.

To the Republican convention delegates he served notice that if nominated he would make no whistle-stopping, barnstorming campaign. If it's a gad-about candidate they want, they should take somebody else. But the Republicans will choose Ike. They know he can win more votes by one such dignified TV appearance than any other candidate can in months of vote-casting oratory.

Mr. Eisenhower's decision to run again is a personal condition—what he can do, what his doctors admonish, how he proposes to live and work. The campaign is on. Let none enter the battle less lightly than the President. Small men of large ambitions will not fare well in November.

The guessing has ended, the campaign has begun. Dwight Eisenhower has reported for another tour of duty. First at a press conference and then in a remarkable telecast to the American people the President affirmed his readiness for another term.

In evening talk . . . Mr. Eisenhower showed plainly that his decision came out of a devoutly prayerful consideration, with all factors in the problem fully weighed. And he sought to give the people all the facts required for their own decisions.

He made no bones about the change in his own situation. But he left no doubt of his own confidence that he can perform the essential and very great duties of the presidency for another five years. He feels he has proved this in practice in the last two months, when he had the added task of making this decision.

longed and concentrated pressures. Personal and family sacrifices have not been under-estimated. There is no such complaint as Cleveland's: "I look upon the next four years as a self-inflicted penance for the good of the country." But manifestly a soldierly sense of duty has been a key. A feeling of obligation to carry forward unfinished tasks—the work for peace and the uniting of this party and the nation—this has been basic.

Undoubtedly the common belief that the Republican party would develop new and deep fissures if he did not run placed pressures upon him, as did predictions that his party could hardly expect to win Congress without him. But the man who spoke to Americans last night did not sound like the prisoner of a cabal of selfish men pushing him into battle to keep them in power. Dwight Eisenhower would be a poor choice for a puppet role.

On two party questions he threw sharp light. He left the issue of a vice presidential nomination wide open, saying it was traditional to nominate a President first. And he showed his preference—"under a two-party system" where responsibility should be clear—for a Republican Congress. He did not quite say so, but it is in the record that he has had better support on several issues from Democrats than from Republicans. Conceivably the President could do more than they have to utilize the Eisenhower strength for their party simply by giving more support to Eisenhower policies.

Chicago Tribune: The news that President Eisenhower is a candidate for re-election pretty nearly everybody in this country including, we do not doubt, the vast majority of Democratic voters. At the very least, his announcement means that after a long and conscientious review he had reached the conclusion that he was strong enough to carry the burdens of the presidency for another four years.

Mr. Eisenhower can have the Republican nomination in August without opposition. The chances of his victory in November are surely excellent and no one recognizes that more clearly than the Democratic leaders. Conceivably the Democrats, or those of them whose political activity increased markedly after the President was stricken, may now lose interest in the forthcoming campaign on the theory that Mr. Eisenhower has victory in the bag.

For the sake of the country we hope this attitude will not prevail. We were not among those who believed that Republican prospects depended entirely upon Mr. Eisenhower's decision. We said here a few weeks ago that the Republican party is not a one-man party, and we say today that this is not a one-party country. A great many things can happen between now and November.

Chicago Daily News: As a man, President Eisenhower is deeply spiritual, a word which recurs frequently in his remarks. He sees it to mean a highly refined concept of man's moral duty to himself and his fellow men, as well as to God. It is his fervent devotion to this ideal which has made him a great leader in the eyes of the trust and affection of all who sense this quality.

With his nomination by the Republican convention all but signed, the question will now turn to the kind of campaign he will conduct, and the candidate for Vice President.

The President's health will be an issue on both counts. In 1944, the Democrats protested that it was scandalously wicked to suggest that President Roosevelt's condition should be weighed in the total balance. But the difference was that Mr. Roosevelt's deteriorating health not only was not admitted, but was as fully concealed as possible.

In the precincts, indeed in every home, the subject (Mr. Eisenhower's health) will be discussed. There will be no more evidence than is now on the record. But distortions are inevitable. . . . A bad cold that sent him to bed two days before election might very well alter the outcome.

To dump Nixon at San Francisco . . . would be to acknowledge that his high praise did not necessarily convey unwavering support; to confess, in effect, that he had made a serious mistake, or to imply that his desire for re-election might lead him to place expediency above his devotion to what he believed right.

Milwaukee Journal: . . . Millions of Americans who have faith that Mr. Eisenhower is the best qualified leader in this time of international crisis will hail the decision and pledge their support to the election campaign ahead. Republican leaders and politicians, terrified at losing the magic of the Eisenhower name and frightened by the G.O.P. succession scramble to elect a President who would have a collective sigh of relief. . . . The American people, in their wisdom, will decide whether they want to elect a President who has suffered a heart attack and who would be 70 by the time he could finish a new term. Many voters will recall that the country has never had a President that old.

It is a simple fact that many Americans with full faith in President Eisenhower do not believe Nixon mature enough, or wise enough, or straightforward enough, to be President. Many Republicans would like him shelved for a stronger and more respected man. It is virtually accepted, however, that if Mr. Eisenhower wants Nixon to be his running mate again he will have him.

Like the matter of presidential health, however, the Nixon candidacy would be a foremost issue of the campaign.

Kansas City Star: . . . Some immediate effects of the announcement are obvious. Both at home and abroad there is doubtless a feeling of relief that the months of uncertainty and suspense at last are over.

A certain result of the political field will be a revival of unity in the Republican organization, a softening if not termination of feuds and factionalism and a strong resolution to work for another victory at the polls. Ike's popularity has been maintained at a high level and it could be expected to continue in the months ahead.

Democratic reactions will be further revealed as the days for another victory at the polls. Naturally the candidates and other leaders of the opposition cannot be highly pleased whatever may be the initial comments about Ike's recovery and his appraisal of his physical condition.

As to the campaign, it will be the rip-roaring sort in some quarters but not so far as the President is concerned.

Denver Post: The decision implies problems, some of which were raised by Mr. Eisenhower himself beyond the President's control. Every thoughtful citizen will want to reflect upon those problems and devise his own answers. We refer, for example, to the course of action that Mr. Eisenhower's "yes" imposes on his own party: the challenge to responsible conduct in implementing national policy, both foreign and domestic.

The Republican party, or more important the American people, cannot have it both ways: They cannot have the advantage, in internal politics, of Mr. Eisenhower's enormous and trustful following, and security in a world of stealthy plots, fermenting nationalism and cold war if they ask this one man to carry too great a burden. The reasons are obvious. As of this moment, we are not at all certain that the answers to the President's problem are at all answered. . . .

There has been, we believe, a growing swell of self-delusion as to this country's achievements in the cold war. There is no doubt about the sturdy health of the nation's economy, a fact which commends Mr. Eisenhower's first term and his bid for another. But it has been the growing concern of many that, important though American prosperity is to world peace, victory at home not be confused with deterioration of our influence if not defeat abroad. And it is significant that the confusion and contradictions of American policy that appear to have cost us a measure of leadership in world affairs have coincided with the five-month period of the President's illness.

Dallas News: . . . Viewed solely from the standpoint of the Eisenhower service to date, the prospect of a second term is a welcome one. Under extremely adverse conditions, he has made an able national leader that his candidacy entails the risk of no made mistakes. Of course he has. What President has not? But the news, when criticizing error, has been certain that Eisenhower mistakes are honest ones and few. The American public is certain to feel the same way.

Atlanta Constitution: President Eisenhower's decision to seek a second term in the White House came as no great surprise. The dramatic buildup to yesterday's climax had left few in doubt as to what the decision would be. . . .

Ike's popularity with the American people, which amounts to genuine affection on the part of many, should not obscure the very real problems that he will face. The President has had a heart attack from which he is just recovering. He has admitted himself that it would be foolish to think his health ever will be as good again. . . .

The truth is that nobody knows whether Ike, if re-elected, will be able to perform the duties of the presidency for another four years.

The two major questions then are those concerning the vice presidency and who will discharge the powers and duties of the office in the event Ike is re-elected and become incapacitated for an even longer period. The Constitution is not clear on the latter point. . . .

Ike is a good man and always has shown a great devotion to duty. But his historic decision now must be weighed in the proper perspective of his health and its effect on his ability to discharge the duties of the highest office in the land.

Des Moines Register: The Register welcomes President Eisenhower's decision to become a candidate for re-election. We believe that the welfare of the nation would be served by President Eisenhower's leadership for another four years. . . .

Thoughts of retirement to the peace and quiet of his Pennsylvania farm must have been tempting. He must have reflected somewhat on the fact that he has given many more years of his life in the service of his country than most men are called upon to give.

There are many actions and policies of the Eisenhower Administration to be debated before the voters. And it is important that they should be debated fully as a guide to the direction the Federal Government is to take in the next four years.

Detroit Free Press: . . . Only a failure of stamina which he plainly does not anticipate can alter the situation. So, from here on, the G.O.P. can be counted on to regard Mr. Eisenhower as a convention certainty—and with a great deal of reason a November certainty, also.

In his editor's notebook of last Sunday, Editor John S. Knight wrote: "If Eisenhower becomes a candidate, it is not because he believes the job can be made easier. An affirmative decision will mean, instead, that after 45 years of devoted service, the President, a dedicated man, is once again thinking of his country and not of himself. . . . If the President decides to run, it means that he is prepared to again accept leadership in full degree."

Leadership, as it is represented by the Presidency of the United States, is a grueling, demanding task. It rests as a titanic burden upon the man in the White House.

Philadelphia Bulletin: President Eisenhower has reached a decision based on a sense of duty to his fellow-citizens as he sees it. That alone persuaded him to run for the presidency a second time. . . .

A President of the United States has obligations to himself, to his family, to his party and to his country. It looks as if Dwight D. Eisenhower considered these in the reverse order of their mention here.

Louisville Courier-Journal: President Eisenhower's announcement of his availability to run again surprised practically nobody. A month or six weeks ago it might have been otherwise, but in that period a number of happenings had pointed to the single conclusion. . . . It produced at least one sign that the President was alert and positive where essential obligations were concerned, which means that he felt himself able and ready.

This sign was his veto of the natural gas bill, the event that probably more than any other convinced people that Mr. Eisenhower was inclining toward the decision that came at last. We say this not in relation to any political meanings in the veto. It seemed rather to show an executive's confident and decisive grasp of a situation. . . .

Vice President Nixon is not the most popular prospect as the first in line of succession. One need only look at the turmoil of Republicans in the state of California alone to see what an insistence at this time on Mr. Nixon's renomination could mean to party unity and outlook. There might have been a time, in the days of his more tender political innocence, when Mr. Eisenhower would have come close to conditioning his own availability upon the importance of keeping a "team" intact. He has not now done so. He has taken a stand which puts him beyond the necessity of doing so. He is characteristically honest as to his own condition and at the same time wise in political knowledgeability.

Providence (R.I.) Journal-Bulletin: President Eisenhower's decision to stand for a second term impels a mixture of emotions mingling relief, happiness and a sort of sorrowful pride. At the same time, it means to party unity and outlook a whole new set of practical political prospects. . . .

To begin with, there no longer is any doubt whatever whether the Republican candidate this year will be, Mr. Eisenhower will be nominated at San Francisco by acclamation.

Once that has been accomplished though, the outlook for a campaign with several marked differences from normal. For motives which probably combine considerations of health with his concept of presidential propriety. Mr. Eisenhower has made it plain that he will not himself conduct the ordinary style of barnstorming, whistle-stop canvass. . . . This means that the heavy duty of the campaign will fall upon the President's subordinates, headed by the vice-presidential candidate.

Nor is this the only reason why the second spot on the G.O.P. ticket will be of inordinate importance this year. The President's age and recent illness will, inevitably and properly, compel the voters to examine far more searching than usual the vice-presidential candidate's character and qualifications for the topmost office.

In this connection, we are glad the President has reserved decision on a running-mate until the Republican convention.

Richmond (Va.) News-Dispatch: President Eisenhower's announcement yesterday that he will be available for another term came as manna to the Republicans, who obviously have no candidate in the class with "Ike" one of the greatest voters in American history.

Even though Mr. Eisenhower refuses to "barnstorm" to get another four years in the White House, it seems probable that he can defeat any opponent by making a few television appearances. Various other candidates (Harding and Coolidge, for instance) won landslide victories with only a minimum of campaigning when neither radio nor TV was available for electioneering purposes. But thanks to modern electronics, President Eisenhower can flash that 1000-watt smile of his into almost every home in the land. It makes him practically unbeatable.

There remains the fact that a man who has had one heart attack can always have another. A man who has never had one can have an attack too for that matter. So there will always be the possibility that "Ike" will have a setback in the middle of this year's campaign. Such a development could easily defeat him.

Hartford (Conn.) Courant: It is right that American Presidents should seek the second term that is normally theirs. Had Mr. Eisenhower's recovery been less spectacular than it apparently has been, it would have been different. With the verdict of the doctors and his own feeling, after testing things as best he could, point only one way ahead. But again neither the doctors nor still less the President himself have minimized the hazards. These hazards are sure to figure in the campaign, and will make the choice of a Vice President far more crucial this year than it usually is. . . .

If the way ahead now looks clear, we must nevertheless guard against assumptions that come too easily. Let him who guessed right in 1948 pontificate now. The rest of us had better be aware that the future is always open. All during the five months of the President's illness and the resulting inspection we have taken it for granted, regardless of party, that if the President ran again he would be elected, that if he did not the Democratic candidate would be elected. Both are obviously likely. But neither is necessarily so. Any number of things can happen.

Raleigh (N.C.) News & Observer: Republicans should not rejoice alone. Democrats also should be glad that the case for and against the Eisenhower Administration will be presented by Eisenhower. He has been responsible for the faults and virtues of the government he has led. He must be fully responsible for the government which he asks be entrusted to him for four more years. He runs this time as no glamorous war hero but as chief Republican politician on a political record seeking continuation of political power.

The record of the Eisenhower Administration deserves the debate which it will receive in the campaign this year. Only Eisenhower as candidate could make that the clear debate. . . .

DEFENDANT FITS DESCRIPTION OF KILLER, FIVE SAY

Out Richard Crimmins as Resembling Masked Man.

Prosecution testimony at the murder trial of Richard J. Crimmins continued today in the court of Criminal Judge Michael J. Scott, after five witnesses testified Crimmins fits the general description of a man who shot and killed John S. Bernal in a robbery of the Lendoff Cocktail Lounge, 2357 Palm street, early the morning of Feb. 22 last year.

The witnesses included Harry B. Lendoff Jr., the proprietor; a waitress on duty at the time, Mrs. Alice Allen, and three of the 20 customers who saw Bernal, also a customer, shot as he tried to stop two men who had robbed Lendoff of $500.

Bernal was hit by one of three shots as he advanced toward one of the robbers, saying, "Go ahead and shoot, I'm not afraid of you."

The holdup men were masked with scarves, but the witnesses said Crimmins fits the general description of the one who stood at the door, and did the shooting, after his companion had taken the money. Marvin D. Berry has been indicted as the companion. He and Crimmins, both former St. Louis convicts, were arrested at El Paso, Tex., about three weeks after the shooting.

Mrs. Allen, the waitress, has said Berry had been in the bar at other times and that she recognized him by his voice and manner as well as his size and build. She said he noticed her looking at him closely, and adjusted the scarf on his face.

Two El Paso policemen testified they arrested Crimmins and Berry in the course of a burglary investigation and took three pistols away from them. Two were introduced in evidence, for identification by witnesses. Witnesses testified that one was of the same model as that used in the holdup.

Eisenhower's Candidacy 'Grave Mistake,' Norman Thomas Says

Socialist Fears Health Will Force President to Let His 'Team' Run Government.

President Eisenhower's second-term candidacy is a "grave mistake" because if he is re-elected, it is not certain he will be able to devote full time to the job, Norman Thomas, the veteran Socialist leader, said in an interview here today.

Thomas, who himself was a candidate for the presidency six times, said he thought Mr. Eisenhower and the Republicans were taking "too great a gamble" because of the President's health.

Thomas, 71 years old, declared he is not unfriendly to the President, saying, "I am a Republican in the sense that I am a citizen of the United States with any degree of complicity."

But, he added, "I'm afraid the may become a remote and beloved father, and he forced to let the Government be carried on by his 'team.' It is unwise for us to have some type of commission form of Government."

Discusses Nixon. A tall angular man, whose bald head is fringed by wiry shocks of white hair, Thomas spoke with greater intensity when he discussed the question of Vice President Nixon again being Mr. Eisenhower's running mate this year.

"I take an extraordinarily dim view of the possibility of Mr. Nixon becoming President," he declared. "He will lose many votes for like if he is chosen again."

"His attempt to use the Supreme Court's de-segregation decisions for political gain show his extreme lack of judgment."

"He has no sense of Marquis of Queensberry rules in politics. If he runs again he will serve only to unite the liberal and conservative wings of the Democratic party—they all hate him."

The Eisenhower candidacy, he continued, also raises questions of what will happen in case of the death or disability of the winning candidate for President before his inauguration. He said he assumed the Electoral College could elect any man it wants, an unprecedented situation. These questions should be resolved promptly by Congress or through constitutional amendment, he said.

Addresser Ambassadors Club. Thomas, who was a Presbyterian clergyman and settlement worker before taking up the Socialist cause many years ago, spoke last night on "A Faith for Our Times," before a dinner meeting of the Ambassadors Club of St. Louis, at the Coronado Hotel.

He said most Americans' faith in democracy is not "deep or positive," but is based instead on the negative approach of disliking "Hitlerism, Stalinism or other dictatorial systems."

The people of the United States, he declared, "must transcend the prejudices we grew up with and strive to make our democracy work."

Sharply critical of the University of Alabama riots, he declared:

"Nearly a century after the Emancipation Proclamation some of our citizens still have so little rights that one woman is not safe going to college."

"As if We Had Lost Battle." The Autherine Lucy case, he said, has caused the United States to suffer in the eyes of the world as disastrously as if we had lost a battle.

Thomas also denounced the seniority system in the United States Senate, under which Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi, an outspoken critic of the desegregation rulings, is expected to be made chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Thomas, who made his last race for President in 1948, said he does not plan to run again.

VIENNA MAESTRO JEERED BECAUSE OF LONG ABSENCE

VIENNA, March 2 (UPI)—Conductor Karl Boehm was jeered last night when he returned to the Vienna State Opera House for the first time since his eight-week conducting tour in the United States.

The noise was so great he could hardly make the orchestra hear him as he began Beethoven's Fidelio Overture. Later the noise subsided but there was little applause when he finished.

Vienna opera lovers were angered because he had remained away more than two months. Newspapers complained that his long absence caused the high standard of the Opera House to "fall down to provincial level."

Boehm offered his resignation yesterday but no final decision is expected until Saturday.

'CRIMINAL OF DISTINCTION' MAKES FBI LIST TWICE

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—Nick George Montos, expert safecracker and alumnus of the FBI's list of "10 most wanted men," achieved today the distinction of getting on that list a second time.

The FBI said it never has happened before. It said Montos, 39 years old, is almost as skilled at prison-breaks as he is at taking safes apart. He has five prison breaks to his credit. The latest occurred Jan. 10 when he and a life-terminer escaped from the Mississippi State Penitentiary. He was serving a seven-year sentence for burglary.

He was previously on the "most wanted" list in 1954. Two FBI agents arrested him in an automobile at Westchester, Ill.

SNOWSLIDE HITS FIVE IDAHO HOMES; ONE KILLED, 12 HURT

WALLACE, Idaho, March 2 (AP)—A snowslide smashed into five houses at Mace, five miles north of Wallace, early today, killing at least one person and injuring 12. The slide down Burke canyon was at least half a mile long.

Several automobiles were buried. Timmy Spencer, 10 years old, was reported killed in the slide and his mother injured. Mr. and Mrs. Art Bell and their eight children were taken to a hospital with undetermined injuries, and Mrs. Steve Reister and four daughters were treated for shock. Rotary plows have been dispatched to the scene.

NORMAN THOMAS

President before his inauguration. He said he assumed the Electoral College could elect any man it wants, an unprecedented situation. These questions should be resolved promptly by Congress or through constitutional amendment, he said.

Addresser Ambassadors Club. Thomas, who was a Presbyterian clergyman and settlement worker before taking up the Socialist cause many years ago, spoke last night on "A Faith for Our Times," before a dinner meeting of the Ambassadors Club of St. Louis, at the Coronado Hotel.

He said most Americans' faith in democracy is not "deep or positive," but is based instead on the negative approach of disliking "Hitlerism, Stalinism or other dictatorial systems."

The people of the United States, he declared, "must transcend the prejudices we grew up with and strive to make our democracy work."

Sharply critical of the University of Alabama riots, he declared:

"Nearly a century after the Emancipation Proclamation some of our citizens still have so little rights that one woman is not safe going to college."

"As if We Had Lost Battle." The Autherine Lucy case, he said, has caused the United States to suffer in the eyes of the world as disastrously as if we had lost a battle.

Thomas also denounced the seniority system in the United States Senate, under which Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi, an outspoken critic of the desegregation rulings, is expected to be made chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Thomas, who made his last race for President in 1948, said he does not plan to run again.

VIENNA MAESTRO JEERED BECAUSE OF LONG ABSENCE

VIENNA, March 2 (UPI)—Conductor Karl Boehm was jeered last night when he returned to the Vienna State Opera House for the first time since his eight-week conducting tour in the United States.

The noise was so great he could hardly make the orchestra hear him as he began Beethoven's Fidelio Overture. Later the noise subsided but there was little applause when he finished.

Vienna opera lovers were angered because he had remained away more than two months. Newspapers complained that his long absence caused the high standard of the Opera House to "fall down to provincial level."

Boehm offered his resignation yesterday but no final decision is expected until Saturday.

'CRIMINAL OF DISTINCTION' MAKES FBI LIST TWICE

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—Nick George Montos, expert safecracker and alumnus of the FBI's list of "10 most wanted men," achieved today the distinction of getting on that list a second time.

The FBI said it never has happened before. It said Montos, 39 years old, is almost as skilled at prison-breaks as he is at taking safes apart. He has five prison breaks to his credit. The latest occurred Jan. 10 when he and a life-terminer escaped from the Mississippi State Penitentiary. He was serving a seven-year sentence for burglary.

He was previously on the "most wanted" list in 1954. Two FBI agents arrested him in an automobile at Westchester, Ill.

SNOWSLIDE HITS FIVE IDAHO HOMES; ONE KILLED, 12 HURT

WALLACE, Idaho, March 2 (AP)—A snowslide smashed into five houses at Mace, five miles north of Wallace, early today, killing at least one person and injuring 12. The slide down Burke canyon was at least half a mile long.

Several automobiles were buried. Timmy Spencer, 10 years old, was reported killed in the slide and his mother injured. Mr. and Mrs. Art Bell and their eight children were taken to a hospital with undetermined injuries, and Mrs. Steve Reister and four daughters were treated for shock. Rotary plows have been dispatched to the scene.

RECENTLY FREED EX-CONVICT STABBED TO DEATH IN FIGHT

Robert A. Stephens, 1320A Biddle street, released from Missouri Penitentiary last Monday, was stabbed to death early today by Albert Mitchell, who telephoned police to report the stabbing shortly after officers had found Stephens' body on the pavement in the 1300 block of Carr street.

Stephens' wife, Willie Rose, said she and her husband, Negroes, had been celebrating his release in a tavern in the 1300 block of Biddle and that Stephens and Mitchell quarreled after she danced with Mitchell. Police quoted Mitchell, also a Negro, as saying Stephens knocked him down and kicked him outside the tavern and that Mitchell then drew a pocket knife and cut Stephens in the abdomen after chasing him two blocks. Stephens, 32 years old, had served a two-year term for burglary. Mitchell lives in the 2800 block of Stoddard street.

$300,000 PAID SO FAR SETTLING SUITS IN BLAST

29 Claims Filed in Explosion at Wilson-Keith in Which 6 Persons Were Killed.

More than $300,000 has been paid in out-of-court settlements of 29 personal injury and death claims growing out of an explosion June 10, 1934, at Wilson-Keith Co., 4140 Chippewa street, it was reported today.

Mortimer A. Rosecan, attorney for Universal Match Corp., named jointly with Wilson-Keith in the damage suits, said only a few cases are still pending, and he expected them to be settled soon.

A total of more than $1,500,000 in damage suits for personal injury, death and property loss was filed after the blast which demolished the Wilson-Keith plant, killing six persons. It was making pellets for Universal Match for use in flame throwers.

First settlement, for $35,000, was negotiated last Jan. 25 in the $200,000 injury suit filed by Mrs. Willie Mae Hucker, Negro, 5131 Maple avenue, as the suit was about to go to trial. Subsequent settlements, for amounts ranging down to $2500, followed, with insurance company attorneys figuring in the negotiations.

Laclede Gas Co. was also named as a defendant in most of the damage suits but it has not figured in the settlements. A company spokesman said no evidence was produced that gas figured in the blast.

NAVY BLIMP CRASHES IN SEA BUT GETS AIRBORNE AGAIN

NORFOLK, Va., March 2 (AP)—A Navy blimp crashed into the Atlantic ocean yesterday 68 miles east of Kitty Hawk, N.C., when flowing at low altitude.

The blimp managed to become airborne again with a crippled power plant. Two crew members, apparently thrown out at the time of the crash, were later rescued from a life raft by a helicopter.

The blimp landed safe late yesterday at Weeksville, N.C.

MAX SCHWABE MAY RUN IN SENATE G.O.P. PRIMARY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
COLUMBIA, Mo., March 2—Former United States Representative Max Schwabe, now director of the Farmers' Home Administration here, said today that he is thinking about running for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

Schwabe, who served three terms in Congress from the old second congressional district, said "I'd like mighty well to be Senator." But he added that he is not ready to formally enter the race.

No Republican has filed so far to challenge United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. of St. Louis, the Democratic incumbent, who has announced he will seek re-election this year. Other Republicans reported to be considering entering the race are former State Senator R. Jasper Smith of Springfield and Herbert Douglas of Neosho, the unsuccessful G.O.P. candidate for Attorney General in 1948.

JUKE BOX FIRM INDICTED ON U.S. TRUST CHARGES

Seeburg, Largest Machine Manufacturer in Nation, Named With 31 Distributors.

CHICAGO, March 2 (UP)—A federal grand jury today indicted the J. P. Seeburg Corp. and 31 distributors on charges of violating anti-trust laws in the distribution of juke boxes.

The indictment, returned before United States District Judge John P. Barnes, charged that Seeburg and the distributors conspired to conduct the distribution of juke boxes on a rental basis only.

The distributors, in metropolitan areas throughout the United States, include W. B. Distributors, St. Louis.

A civil suit filed simultaneously with the return of the indictment asked for an injunction to prohibit the alleged violations, and a court order forcing the firms to make the machines available for sale.

Seeburg is the nation's largest manufacturer of juke boxes. The indictment charged that the firm and its distributors entered into agreements not to sell to taverns or restaurants, forcing them instead to rent the machines.

Carl T. McKelvey, vice president of the Seeburg Corp., issued a statement saying that the company actually had taken the challenged provisions out of distributors' contracts "a year ago when we first learned the attitude of the Justice Department about similar provisions in the automobile, radio and television industries."

Not that the charges have been filed, the statement said, those named will "defend ourselves to the utmost" and if the Government were interested in the best interests of the distributors "rather than in bringing highly technical anti-trust actions, this action would never have been brought."

By the Associated Press.

Both the indictment and the civil suit charged Seeburg's operations in placing coin-operated phonograph machines involved a conspiracy in restraint of trade. The Government alleged that Seeburg and the distributors had entered into unlawful agreements under which the distributors agreed not to compete with each other and divide sales territories.

Assistant Attorney General Stanley N. Barnes, anti-trust chief, said in Washington the actions involved "a scheme to boycott restaurant owners and other persons desiring to purchase coin-operated phonographs."

OBJECTORS FAIL, EASTLAND GETS JUDICIARY POST

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—The Senate overrode objections from Senators Wayne Morse (Dem.), Oregon, and Herbert H. Lehman (Dem.), New York, today and elected Senator James O. Eastland (Dem.), Mississippi, outspoken opponent of racial desegregation, as chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Action on the resolution for Eastland's elevation was taken by voice vote. In line with the Senate's custom of filling committee chairmanships by seniority, Eastland had been selected earlier by the Democratic policy committee to succeed the late Senator Harley Kilgore (Dem.), West Virginia, as chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Morse and Lehman argued that Eastland, long an opponent of civil rights legislation and outspoken in his denunciation of the Supreme Court's decision outlawing segregation in the public schools, lacked the impartiality to serve as chairman of the Judiciary Committee. No record vote was called for on the resolution. It was approved by a shouted "aye" vote despite some loud "noes."

DANIEL A. REED, AT 80, TO RUN FOR RE-ELECTION

DUNKIRK, N. Y., March 2 (UP)—Representative Daniel A. Reed, 80-year-old Republican who recovered from a heart attack suffered in Europe last year, announced yesterday he would be a candidate for re-election this fall. Reed, a 38-year veteran of the House of Representatives, informed Chautauque County Republican Committee he would again seek the nomination in the Forty-third Congressional district.

78 KILLED BY SNOWSLIDE IN SOUTH KOREA, 25 MISSING

SEOUL, March 2 (AP)—A snowslide that roared down the mountainous slopes of Korea's famed Punchbowl battleground yesterday crushed 83 South Korean army barracks and left at least 103 South Koreans dead or missing. No Americans were in the area, 100 miles northeast of Seoul. Officers just back from the isolated Korean front placed the toll at 78 known dead, 25 missing and believed dead and 54 injured. Officials expected the deaths to rise when communications cleared up. Rescuers were encountering great difficulty in reaching the scene. Snow was piled up to 19 feet deep from a three-day fall.

3 FLORIDA UTILITIES PLAN BIG ATOMIC POWER PLANT

MIAMI, March 2 (UP)—Three large utility companies disclosed plans yesterday to construct a 200,000 kilowatt power plant that will use atomic energy as fuel—the largest nuclear power project yet proposed by private industry. The joint announcement by Florida Power & Light Co. of Miami, Tampa Electric Co. of Tampa and the Florida Power Corp. of St. Petersburg said the plant should be turning out electricity by 1962 or 1963. Estimates on the cost of the plant ranged from $50,000,000 to $200,000,000, but a spokesman for the Miami firm said "We hope a better and cheaper process may be found before actual construction gets under way."

LOCAL SPEAKERS BARRED

HAGERSTOWN, Md., March 2 (AP)—Washington County Democrats will hold their annual Jefferson-Jackson day dinner March 6 with Senator Sparkman (Dem.), Alabama, the featured speaker. Democratic congressional and senatorial candidates will be barred from the dinner in the interest of "party unity."

CHILDS Cooper Quietly Preached Need For Closer Co-operation With India During Month in U.S.

Ambassador to New Delhi Argued for More Understanding and Patience for People Struggling for Nationhood — He Praises Krishna Menon.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

IN THE MONTH that he spent in Washington after eight months of service as Ambassador to India, John Sherman Cooper performed an extremely useful function. With the quiet, unassuming manner that is characteristic of this Kentuckian who is still in the Kentucky tradition called "judge" by his old friends, Cooper preached the need for close and friendly co-operation with India's leaders.

He was not "selling" any particular aid program as an easy solution although he did advocate economic assistance to India of about $100,000,000 a year for the coming five years.

Rather, in speech after speech and before several congressional groups, the Ambassador argued the need for greater understanding, patience and tolerance for a people struggling to achieve nationhood and full independence.

Back in New Delhi. Cooper has now returned to New Delhi to his post as Secretary of State Dulles goes to the Indian capital on his second stop in his Asian tour. Dulles will confer with Prime Minister Nehru and other members of the Indian cabinet on India's second five-year development plan, on the status of the Portuguese colony of Goa and on the outstanding problems and differences impairing the relationship between the two nations.

But, in order to be present during the hearings on foreign economic aid, Cooper expects to return to Washington in early April. He will then again make the case for close co-operation with the countries of Southeast Asia that have declined to be committed either to Soviet Russia or the West. Of this group, which includes Burma, Ceylon and Indonesia, the largest by far is India with a population of nearly 300,000,000.

Simple Theme. During his stay in America, Cooper made seven public speeches. What he said publicly did not differ markedly from what he said in private. His theme was a simple one. What he repeated over and over went more or less like this:

"We must remember that India is a new nation. We must try to recall what we were like when we first won our independence and we were having all kinds of troubles. Of course, the Indians are difficult to deal with sometimes.

"It could hardly be otherwise. They are a very sensitive people. They are proud. They are making progress. Don't make any mistake about it. They want peace. They feel they have to have peace. Another war, and they know it would involve them directly or indirectly, would probably destroy their chances to become a strong and independent nation. We must always remember that when we criticize them for what we call neutralism and Communism, they're not on our side in the sense that they can be lined up and counted in terms of a pact or an alliance. If we try to force them into that role, then there is a real "Everywhere that I've gone in India I have found people were friendly. They know what America is trying to do to help them in this great undertaking they are engaged in. And they are making progress. Don't make any mistake about it. They want peace. They feel they have to have peace. "We must make allowance for all these things. We've had our independence for nearly 200 years. We can help India. We ourselves know that our motives are disinterested. We want the Indian people to be free and independent. But we must make them understand this. It's going to take time and we must be patient.

"They're not on the Communist side. They're not on our side in the sense that they can be lined up and counted in terms of a pact or an alliance. If we try to force them into that role, then there is a real

Chilean Labor Chief in Prison, Still Popular

Says He Learned From Christ and Gandhi That Violence Is Bad.

By DONALD GRANT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
SANTIAGO, March 2.

OTARIO BLEST, president of the Federation of Labor in Chile — an organization which has 1,200,000 members in a country with a total population of only 6,000,000 — is a prisoner in the federal penitentiary in Santiago. He is surely one of the most unusual prisoners in the world today.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent interviewed Blest in the prison. Taking perhaps 45 minutes of Blest's weekly visiting hour was a difficult achievement. All the time, outside the prison office where the interview took place, a strange crowd waited to talk to the white-haired labor leader. The crowd was composed of union members who had been admitted to the prison stockade, fellow prisoners and prison guards.

Blest is certainly the most popular man in the prison. He may be the most popular man in Chile.

He has only two close friends in the world — but a host of admirers. His friends are his mother and the Catholic archbishop, Jose Maria Caro of Chile. His admirers include many Communists, both in Chile and in Soviet Russia, which Blest visited as an official guest in 1953.

Led General Strike. Blest is a devout Catholic, a mystic, and in his own words "a follower of Mahatma Gandhi." He is in prison for leading a general strike of Chilean workers last January, a strike he said failed only because the leaders were arrested before it had a chance to begin.

The Chilean government headed by Gen. Carlos Ibanez del Campo has charged Blest with attempting to disrupt the life of the nation. Blest said government prosecutors have asked that he be held in prison for three years and one day. His trial has not yet been held.

The general strike was called to stop the freezing of wages in Chile under the Klein-Saks plan. Blest said, "Freezing wages hurts the workers. The workers wanted to strike. I had to carry out their wishes."

Blest already has been in prison for three years. He is

PEARSON Superior Oil Made Millions, Paid No Income Tax in '53, '54

By DREW PEARSON
(Copyright, 1956.) WASHINGTON.

SENATE INVESTIGATORS have just discovered that Superior Oil Co., whose president tried to give $2500 to Senator Case, not only paid no income taxes in 1953 and 1954, but actually collected tax credits under the special tax laws written for the benefit of the oil business. Most other corporations have been paying 52 per cent of their net income as taxes since 1952, but the rich oil companies have been paying next to nothing because of depletion allowances and other tax loopholes.

The highest tax Superior has paid in the past 10 years was $3,000,000 in 1948, also under Truman. This was 16.7 per cent of a $17,917,474 income.

In 1946, Superior again paid no income tax.

Most often, the payment has amounted to $200,000, which happened to be the figure for 1949, 1950 and 1952.

By paying only token taxes, the oil companies have been able to raise more money to lobby for more tax loopholes. These, in turn, have freed more money to lobby for still more loopholes—a profitable merry-go-round for the oil men.

Thanks to these astonishing tax benefits, millionaires have sprung up in the oil industry as nowhere else. Texas oil millionaires alone are estimated at

GALLUP Eisenhower's Popularity Is Still Climbing

76 Per Cent Now
Approve of Way
He Handles
State Affairs.

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Mar. 2. THE consistently high level of President Eisenhower's personal popularity is dramatized by an "anniversary audit" just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

In the initial check, conducted in February 1953, after his first month in office, 68 per cent of voters approved of the way he was handling his job as Chief Executive.

Today, three years after the first poll, the President draws a nod of approval from 76 per cent, as follows:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Mr. Eisenhower is handling his job as President?"

The year-by-year trend:

The presidential popularity index has been conducted at intervals in the administrations of Presidents Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower.

By way of comparison, the highest and lowest approval vote obtained for each of the three Presidents is as follows:

EISENHOWER: High of 79 per cent, in August 1955, following the Summit Meeting at Geneva; low of 52 per cent, in November 1954—for a range of 27 per cent.

TRUMAN: High of 87 per cent, in July 1945, three months after he had taken over the reins of government; low of 23 per cent, in November 1951—for a range of 64 per cent.

ROOSEVELT: High of 84 per cent, in January 1942, following Pearl Harbor; low of 50 per cent, in November 1935—for a range of 34 per cent.

Mr. Eisenhower today receives an overwhelming vote of confidence from his own party. More than nine out of every 10 G.O.P. voters (93 per cent) say they approve of the way he is

PHILLIPS Bombers Still Can Do Better Than Missiles, Quarles Says

Air Secretary Asserts Public Has Wrong View — Picture May Not Change Fully for 10 Years.

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Ret.)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 2. THE AMERICAN PUBLIC'S view of the intercontinental missile is completely out of perspective, Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles testified before the House Appropriations Committee Feb. 9.

"I regard as highly misleading and highly damaging to our whole position here," Quarles told the committee, "the whole line of publicity that says: 'This is the ultimate weapon, we have no defense against it.' That the first fellow who gets it is going to be on top and the rest might as well throw in their hands."

Quarles believes that our bombers "can do a better job for some time to come than anyone can hope to do with missiles of any kind." He expects the air-breathing guided missiles to have "the ability to get through a defensive screen within the next 10 years comparable, though not equal to the ballistic missile."

Pilotless Aircraft. By air-breathing missiles Quarles meant pilotless aircraft using some form of jet engine which must get its oxygen from the air. The Air Force has two long-range missiles of this type under development, the Snark and the Navaho.

The Snark is essentially an unmanned bomber with a range of 5000 miles using conventional jet engines. The Navaho is similar, but makes use of a ram-jet engine — the so-called flying stove pipe—which will give it a speed about twice that of sound.

The ballistic missile is a rocket that uses up its fuel in the first minute or so of flight and from then on follows a trajectory like a shell shot from a cannon. It goes up in the air hundreds of miles and then returns to earth in free fall.

Where the air-breathing missiles can be guided by astronomical means, by radio or by internal systems, the ballistic missile can be guided, or more properly, aimed only during the first few miles of its flight.

Quarles believes that long-range guided missiles of either type would not be decisive in a global war five years from now, nor would they play as important a part as the manned bomber.

But in 10 years this may change, not because the ballistic missiles will have been adequately developed nor made satisfactorily accurate, but because defensive missiles of the Nike type may make it almost impossible for manned or unmanned bombers to get through.

"Ten years from now," Quarles told the committee, "the ability of manned bombers to penetrate may be so limited that you might have to depend more on guided missiles in one form or another to supplement the manned bomber."

He did not discuss the guided missile, either winged or rocket type, that might be released from a bomber 100 miles from the target and guided to it by radar.

This is an important threat to the Soviet Union, but not to the United States. The perimeter of the Soviet Union is too great to be defended. In consequence, the Russian air defense system relies on area defenses for the important target areas and puts out advanced defenses only on the most important avenues of approach. This makes them vulnerable to the missile released from a bomber.

U.S. Can Intercept. The United States, in contrast, can project its defenses thousands of miles in advance of its frontiers and intercept long before a missile-carrying bomber could launch its missile against a target.

From Quarles' testimony, it was apparent that he doubted that the 1500- to 5000-mile ballistic missiles would be accurate enough within 10 years to make them desirable weapons.

The great asset of the ballistic missile is that it cannot be intercepted by any means yet in existence. But instead of using one bomb dropped with reasonable accuracy, to destroy a target, a dozen or two dozen missiles may have to be fired to be sure of hitting.

With the accuracy that can be expected in the short term future, a city the size of London would be a suitable target.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption; always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

One Small Voice

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

With a small still voice not likely to be heard above the clamor about the invincible man, I would like to suggest that he just might not be elected.

It is conceded that he will not carry the South this time. It seems apparent that he will not receive either the farm or labor vote.

A great many independents whose support he must have if he is to win are murmuring with discontent about tax cuts for upper-bracket incomes only, about give-aways of the oil and forest reserves, and about federal regulatory agencies tightly rigged to regulate nothing but the privileges of the privileged.

In addition, the whole country is more than a little nervous, in spite of the nearly balanced budget, about the abundance of testimony by military leaders that we are no longer in a position to defend ourselves from attack by a powerful and avowed enemy.

It is even being whispered by some that he is 65 and has a bad heart. It is not unfair but legitimate politics to suggest that that is an obstacle to giving him the one job that holds the well-being of America and of the world in its hands.

Perhaps Mr. Gallup is right and his "unprecedented popularity" makes it a shoo-in. But Mr. Gallup has once or twice before been guilty of wishful thinking. There was the time back in 1948 when Harry Truman couldn't possibly win because of his "unprecedented unpopularity." The verdict of the American electorate is never in until the last vote is counted.

Olivette Bars the 'Y'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I believe the decision of the Olivette Board of Trustees against the Y.M.H.A. building was wrong. Those who furnished the ammunition for the negative vote were motivated only by personal interest.

In spite of expert opinion that property values would not be depreciated but stabilized, the backward-looking people won the day. The decision was unwarranted as the site is zoned for an institution.

If every improvement has to encounter the obstacle of the "Y" facing, I feel sorry for the county people who are entitled to institutions along with other changes in modern living.

FOR PROGRESS.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

As a young girl I learned to swim in the "Y" on Union boulevard. I loved every hour I spent in the place. I had looked forward to my daughter learning to swim in the new building in Olivette near my home.

I happen to be one of a large number of Christians who have been received most graciously and hospitably at the "Y" and I want to express my sincere feeling that an injustice has been done a fine organization in denying them a permit.

I hope that the trustees will see fit to approve the revised plans on March 13.

JULIETTE.

Promised: Facts, Figures

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Reader Norman Cibulka's recent letter, "Wanted: Facts and Figures," is entitled to a reply.

We believe Mr. Cibulka's questions are good valid ones. The Board of Education wants all to know the facts and figures in detail, but the method of supplying this material to all poses a problem.

The records of the school system are a matter of public record. The local press presents pertinent information on occasion. Every available opportunity to appear on radio and television is taken advantage of to tell the story of the workings of the system. Each school is encouraged to stimulate interest in Parent-Teachers' Associations—Patrons' organizations—Mothers' clubs—where school problems are discussed.

The Board of Education would be most happy to supply information to business, fraternal and labor groups if an interest is shown.

It is the duty and responsibility of the Board of Education to present to the electorate the amount of funds needed to operate our educational system—this we have done.

We are prepared to relay the facts and figures upon which we base our conclusion to all who are interested, and we will utilize every method available to us.

OSCAR A. EHRLARD, Member.

Labor's 'Social Gathering'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The very fact that 60 St. Louis politicians of both parties responded to labor's invitation to its "social gathering" indicates the trend of the times. Until recently, the Chambers of Commerce and Manufacturers Associations had a clear field in making friends and punishing their enemies among politicians. It is time that the voice and opinions of the working people received full consideration.

Science and Paper

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

We would like to compliment you on the Feb. 25 editorial regarding new developments in paper. We think that it was excellent and brought to the public's attention the new strides that science is making in the paper industry.

Hall Nominates Nixon

Republican National Chairman Hall lost no time in starting the counter fire to the activity within the G.O.P. to dump Vice President Nixon.

Only a few hours after President Eisenhower in answer to specific questions, had carefully refrained from endorsing the highly controversial Vice President, Mr. Hall held a press conference at which he confidently predicted that Vice President Nixon would be President Eisenhower's running mate again this year.

Why had the President not endorsed Richard M. Nixon when he announced his own availability?

Chairman Hall said Mr. Eisenhower was following political custom in waiting until the head of the ticket was chosen before expressing his preference for a running mate.

Just why it is proper for Chairman Hall to make a choice now that it would be improper for President Eisenhower to make until next August, Mr. Hall did not get around to explaining.

The question of President Eisenhower's health, after his serious heart illness, makes the identity of his running mate of utmost concern to the country, including particularly the independent voters so largely responsible for Mr. Eisenhower's election in 1952. The President himself has quite properly expressed his own concern about the hazards of some unexpected change in his high office.

This means that Dwight D. Eisenhower undoubtedly will wish to give much thought, under these circumstances, to the choice of a running mate. For the nomination of this running mate at San Francisco will be, in the political nature of things, only confirmation of a selection previously made by a President who is to be renominated virtually by acclamation.

If the President is to have a choice in this vitally important matter then it should not be foreclosed by Chairman Hall.

Mr. Eisenhower told the country emphatically Wednesday night that he is and has been for some weeks functioning fully in the presidency. Certainly he is entitled to an opportunity to demonstrate this both to his own satisfaction and to that of the country.

Chairman Hall has assumed to speak in effect for the President on a subject concerning which Mr. Eisenhower, as the No. 1 Republican, deliberately and wisely kept his own counsel. When Chairman Hall did that he undercut to that extent President Eisenhower's demonstration of his full resumption of presidential duties.

That is no service to President Eisenhower.

Down Payment on the Riverfront

The White House has announced a supplemental budget request for $3,000,000 to resume work on the St. Louis riverfront memorial, which is so far little more than a stirring dream. When added to a $1,000,000 contribution from the city, the federal funds would at least be enough to remove the unsightly railroad tracks and complete grading the area.

Since there is nothing political about the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, it is good to see the Republican Administration siding with the appeal for assistance from Missouri's two Democratic Senators and St. Louis's divided congressional delegation. The project now has been checked up to Congress, where the moral obligation to act should be recognized.

St. Louis passed a $7,500,000 bond issue as its share of the $30,000,000 riverfront project, and 40 blocks have long been cleared to make room for the national monument. But the Federal Government has not done its share. Three millions is only a beginning, and St. Louis will have every right to expect more funds in the future.

Pope Pius at Fourscore

Birthday greetings go to Pope Pius XII from many non-Catholics as well as from Roman Catholics the world over. The occasion of felicitations is a double one. Not only has he reached the venerable age of 80, but he has now occupied the throne of the Roman Catholic Church for 17 years.

The esteem of non-Catholics for the frail, gentle, scholarly pontiff was demonstrated when he lay stricken with serious illness. Delegates to an assembly of the National Conference of Churches at Boston, a Protestant gathering, stood with bowed heads to express formally "their sympathy with their Roman Catholic friends in their anxiety over the illness of their spiritual leader."

The pontificate of Pius XII is one that has brought much sorrow to this man of peace. When, as Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, he was elevated to the papal seat early in 1939, the world was already on the verge of war. Hitler and Mussolini had tested out their weapons and their tactics in the Spanish Civil War. Before long bombs were falling close to the Vatican City and the world was locked in the worst struggle in history.

The peace that followed saw Cardinal Tien an exile from his native China. Behind the Iron Curtain, Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary was put through a mock trial. In Poland Cardinal Wyszyński became a prisoner of the Communist state. Cardinal Stepinac was already a prisoner and unable to leave his native Yugoslavia when he would have received the symbolic red hat in Vatican City.

Through it all Pius XII has stood calmly but firmly for peace, for restraint and against excesses in the ideological struggle, for the encouragement of science. He has made the College of Cardinals broadly representative of the world and that alone would mark as historic his tenure at St. Peter's. Surely it is not too much to hope that the Pope's heart yet may be gladdened by the release of followers who have lost their freedom in service to their church.

22-plus Years Later

On March 31, 1933, Bernard F. Dickmann and Walter J. G. Neun were campaigning vigorously for mayor of St. Louis. . . . Anheuser-Busch was delightedly getting ready for the return of 22 beer the following week. . . . Nazi storm troopers drove Jewish judges and attorneys out of the Berlin law courts. . . . A national bank examiner took charge of the Cherokee National Bank amid reports of a $100,000 shortage. . . . British Prime Minister MacDonald visited Benito Mussolini on a peace mission. . . . President Franklin D. Roosevelt tried to end the congressional deadlock over the Administration farm bill. . . . Vandervoort's Basement advertised suits and topcoats at $7.95 each. . . . Piggly Wiggly advertised pork loin roast for 10½ cents a pound, prime rib roast at 15 cents and butter at 19 cents. . . . Wheat sold in Chicago at 50½ cents a bushel, General Motors stock went for 11¼ and U.S. Steel for 27½ on the New York Stock Exchange.

That was March 31, 1933, the day the Missouri Pacific Railroad went into bankruptcy. On Thursday, almost 23 years later, Judge Moore signed the order which ended the long years of court and trustee control, and turned the reorganized railroad over to private owners.

Welcome back, Mo. Pac. We can think of no better wish than that its future period of legal solvency shall last at least as long as its past period of legal bankruptcy.

The Law and Alabama

University of Alabama trustees may have hit on a slick way out of their dilemma concerning Autherine Lucy. But they and Alabama citizens generally would do well to face up to the fact that in the long run there just isn't any way by which they can permanently evade their constitutional obligations as American citizens.

One of those obligations is to live peacefully in an orderly society based on law—law as interpreted by duly constituted courts.

United States District Judge H. Hobart Grooms was speaking for the whole judicial system and the whole concept of constitutional government when he ordered the university trustees to readmit Miss Lucy.

His court, the judge said, would never be used as a beachhead of defiance of the United States Supreme Court. The Supreme Court has explicitly ruled that qualified students cannot be denied admission to state educational institutions on account of their race, and Judge Grooms was faithfully following that opinion in ordering Miss Lucy reinstated. He did what any conscientious Federal judge would have done.

In applying to the court for this order, Miss Lucy had at first charged the university trustees with conspiring to bring about the mob violence which caused her to be suspended. At the hearing, her lawyers withdrew this charge and admitted that they had no evidence to support it. Now the university trustees have seized on Miss Lucy's making of the unsupported charge as grounds for expulsion.

Possibly the trustees can sustain the expulsion without coming into contempt of court. But if they can, still they will not have solved or disposed of the problem before Alabama.

Sooner or later, if not through Miss Lucy then through somebody else, the issue must be faced again. And in the end there can be only one outcome. Alabama, like every other state, will have to make up its mind to live by law, not by mob violence; by the Constitution, not by anarchy; by the principle of equality before the law, not by the privilege of bigotry.

It is long past time when the good and progressive citizens of Alabama—and there are plenty of them—should have set about recapturing the leadership of their state from the fanatics who would defy law and Constitution. A state which can produce such fine Senators as John Sparkman and Lister Hill, the state of Hugo Black and Oscar Underwood, unquestionably possesses the human resources to recover its good name. The first step must be to demonstrate its dedication to a society based on law.

No Trap in Charter Co-operation

It is unfortunate that the St. Louis CIO Industrial Union Council has decided it cannot co-operate with the 800-member Citizens' Charter Committee now being formed. And it is equally regrettable that AFL leaders have not yet accepted invitations to join the committee.

The CIO group favors revision by amendment, a process approved some years ago even by Mayor Tucker—but only as the second-best procedure. Submitting amendment after amendment to the voters is far more cumbersome than voting on a one-package charter modernization recommended by a board of freeholders.

The group also objects that co-operation with such a large committee might put the Industrial Union Council in the position of backing candidates which it could not recommend "in good conscience." As to numbers, surely the broader the support the more clear it will be that charter revision is not the object of some small clique, but the genuine desire of the community as a whole. As for the possibility of unsatisfactory freeholder-candidates, the best safeguard against that is participation in their selection. This does not imply advance approval. Members of the committee may dissent if they become convinced that a mistake has been made.

We hope that, on second thought, those who have doubts on such secondary matters as the make-up of the Citizens' Committee will overcome them and join in the common task.

Poor Start in the Hunt

The failure of the Senate's special bi-partisan committee to get its lobby investigation under way is disquieting.

Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, senior Republican member, says the committee deferred picking a chairman in its first meeting because "you have to know what rules you're going to operate under before electing a chairman."

The fact is that when the committee was named everyone expected Senator Gore of Tennessee to be chairman. He already led the Senate Elections subcommittee and had proved his interest in investigating lobby activities regardless of where the trail led.

If the committee now refuses to put Senator Gore in the chair, the members will leave grounds for suspicion that they do not entirely want a thorough lobby inquiry, or that at least they want an inquiry which can be controlled.

Charles Bartlett, Washington correspondent of The Chattanooga Times, says Senator Bridges and the other three Republican members are opposed to Senator Gore and would limit his power if he were elected chairman. Mr. Bartlett says the committee divided 4 to 4 on strict party lines on several procedural matters.

If that is so, the supposed bi-partisan inquiry has begun with a strictly two-party deadlock. The investigation could not even get off the ground with such a partisan load upon it.

The Democratic majority in Congress probably does not need to be reminded that a Republican Congress kept a G.O.P. majority on the committee which conducted the special Army-McCarthy hearings in 1954. Today the Democrats could, if necessary, turn the lobby inquiry over to a committee with a party majority. But they have permitted a bi-partisan investigation.

Certainly that is the best way to approach the subject of lobbies, which work both sides of the political street. The special committee should avoid destroying the spirit of bi-partisanship in a dispute over the chairmanship. The public expects a full and free investigation, and Senators who try to hinder it will share a heavy responsibility.

Six for Starlings

Six o'clock. That's what does it. Wipes the starting off the big hands of Stamford, Conn.'s City Hall clock, that is. The birds roosting on the hands stopped the clock time after time, till someone with ideas thought up the dodge of stopping the clock at a perpetual 6, so even a bird couldn't catch a clawhold.

At 25 cents or 25 to, a starling of exceptionally doughty nature might hang on, though it could scarcely be solid comfort. At 20 to or 20 after, even a slazy starling would presumably encounter no difficulty. So 6 it is, straight up and down, in starling-stricken Stamford.

SOUTHERN ROAD TO NOWHERE

The Mirror of Public Opinion

West has expiated many sins which Communism still practices, yet Russia hits America where it hurts with propaganda about 'colonialism and racial arrogance; we should try to see ourselves as Asia and Africa see us, and avoid 'ritual of self-esteem.'

Reinhold Niebuhr, Theologian and Author, Professor of Applied Christianity, Union Theological Seminary, in The New Leader

When the two Communist bosses traveled in Asia, dispelled the illusions associated with the "Geneva spirit," and hurled insults at the "imperialist" and "colonialist" nations, they brought to a sharp focus the pain and outrage from which we constantly suffer in our confrontation with Communism.

It is the pain of being judged by an historic force which is more evil than the historic force itself. It is a judgment, but which is nevertheless able to give some plausibility to its judgments and to hide the evil which surrounds them.

It is as if a comparatively respectable man, trying to live honestly but with a slightly shady past (the initial imperialist impact of the Western world upon the colored world), were constantly subjected to the jeers of a hoodlum and bully whose present crimes are so much worse than the past mistakes in his own life that the jeers hurt the sense of moral rightness in the conscience of the accused.

The Dogma of 'Contradictions'

This contemporary experience is only one of the many like experiences which we have had, and to which we will continue to be subjected. Communism is in fact so plausible and clever a device for making sweet appear bitter, and bitter sweet, that we rightly suspect it of demonic inspiration. But the demony is merely a combination of age-old lust for power, to which strong men and nations are tempted, and modern illusions about the goodness of men.

Communism, which exercises a tyrannical sway over its subject nations, tries to aggravate the inevitable frictions in an alliance of free nations. It does this under the persuasion of its dogma of inevitable "contradictions" and animosities between "capitalist" nations. It still serves as a tool of Communist propaganda, though the "contradictions" are infrequently due to economic causes.

The favored target of Communism is in its relation to Asian and African nations. The charge is a little belated, but the residual resentment in the former colonial nations is still so powerful that the indictment tends to stick.

Sorest Point of the West

It is a fact that the first impact of the Western world on Asia and Africa was imperialistic. It is also a fact that the relation between the technical and non-technical nations was not purely exploitative. At best, the imperial nation became a tutor to the subject nation in the arts of a technical civilization, and even in the arts of self-government. The marginal virtues in the imperial relation are obscured by the crude judge, who operates behind the screen of a dogma which makes Russia "non-imperialistic" by definition. It is not a capitalist nation—therefore, not an imperialistic one. It is surprising how much evidence can obliquely fit the dogma or preconception if one presses the point rigorously enough.

Perhaps the sorest point in the relation between the West and the colored continents is the imperialist propaganda. It was certainly more harmful than economic exploitation, and it tainted the most creative imperial ventures, such as the British.

The dogma of Communism makes this human defect of racial prejudice, which is universal as original sin itself, merely the by-product of capitalism. But the power of the indictment against the white world for its race prejudices is so great that Communism, originally an economic creed, has increasingly presumed to judge the non-Communist world for its sins of race prejudice more than for any other defects.

That is why the Supreme Court decision on the schools (certainly not prompted by any reasons of foreign policy) has become the best weapon in the Western arsenal of defense. That is also why such tragic events as the 'Till case in an obscure Mississippi town achieve worldwide significance in our contest with Communism.

Racial prejudice is a grievous affront to human brotherhood and cannot be defended. But we must admit that it is embarrassing to be constantly convicted of a common human weakness by a judge who claims to be morally superior to us because in this, as in other cases, he is more righteous than we are "by definition," that is, by the definition of his dogma.

Main Charge Proved Meaningless

It will be noted that the Communists place increasing weight upon these indictments against "colonialism," "imperialism" and racial arrogance because the increasing economic justice in the healthy Western nations makes the chief charge of Communism against the "injustices" of a "capitalist" society irrelevant and meaningless.

The moral and political accomplishments of the healthy Western nations have robbed Communism of its plausibility as judge and savior of the nations. Significantly, it has not become irrelevant in the less healthy nations, such as France and Italy.

Communism is forced to rely on its peripheral, rather than central, charges against "capitalism." This might be a source of hope for the gradual diminution of the Communist threat. Unfortunately, the peripheral indictments are most relevant on the two continents which have become the chief battleground between democracy and Communism: Asia and Africa.

The Wise Man as an Example

Thus, we are forced in this contest to expiate past errors and correct present ones—this in spite of our continued tendency to revulsion against the indictments of a foe who pretends to be the ultimate judge of the nations, and to be free of the vices which he exhibits, in many instances, in worse form than the free world does.

It is important for us to know why Communism strategy has so shrewdly picked these colored nations as the political battleground between our two systems and why we do not appear as virtuous in these parts of the world as we seem in our own eyes.

If we are to survive this long contest with Communism, we must learn to do collectively what any wise man knows how to do individually. We must learn to profit by the criticisms of those who do not like us by considering that there may be a grain of truth in the malicious vituperations which our enemies level against us.

It may be precisely the truth which has been obscured about us in the ritual of self-esteem in which we are always involved.

PLASTIC EGGSHELLS

John Philip Lewis of the Franklin (N.H.) Journal Transcript, Quoted in Editor & Publisher.

It's only through the press agents that we learn a lot of things. Take eggs, for instance—just got a little release from some egg people that they've developed a system for selling henfruit minus shells by way of a mechanical jigger that cracks and shucks 'em and seals a dozen in plastic packets. This "naked eggs" stuff is the sort of thing you'd never pick up first hand from a chicken.

Between Book Ends

All Quiet on Varus's Front
THE THREE LEGIONS, by Gregory Solon, (Random House, 304 pp., $3.75.)

On the premise that the soldier is the same in any age of history with any weapon, javelin or guided missile, Gregory Solon writes his first novel. It's all there in the late summer of the year 9 A.D. in the gripes of the seasoned G.I., the innocence of the recruit, the cupidity of the dumb sergeant, the demotion of the good officer, the defection of the bad, the boredom, the mud, and finally the blood. Quintus Varus's legions in the reign of Augustus are "alternately marching and camping on their way through middle Europe with their German cohorts. In the uneasy peace they are bedeviled by marauders in the rear and the machinations of the German Prince Arminius in their midst.

Brilliant, cynical Cinna, the Tribune, a sort of inspector, as well as commander, saw what was going on and what was coming, but his superior would not listen and the debacle that followed put an end to the proud legions which were thought invincible, and dragged the golden Eagles in the dust.

Among the camp followers, who had all been put "off limits" to the men, was one Thessia who gained the favor of Cinna and came to live in his tent. This brought the inevitable complications, leading to the crucifixion of a soldier and the near ruin of the officer. The recruit gets the girl.

The outwitting of the Romans by the German barbarians ends in a terrifying battle of annihilation. An exciting and graphic description bearing out then as now the immediacy of Sherman's famous remark about war. Mr. Solon started young as a poet and as a soldier, and there is much evidence of both in his book. Something of the quality of "All Quiet" or Hemingway in his punchy sentences, brutal scenes, and very funny service humor, and a great deal of the poet in the beauty of delineation of men and the situations which history forces upon them.

A Warm and Courageous Life

OPEN EVERY DOOR, by Zelda Popkin, (Dutton, 378 pp., $3.75.)

This is more of a report on the career, rather than an autobiography, of a restless and full-living woman who, with her husband, made quite a success of press agency in the '30s and '40s. Persons in the news professions in the East will be most interested in this story, since they were obviously most familiar with the material. But others will find it the warmly written account of a warm and courageous life. Mrs. Popkin has faced up to life, with its pleasures, its excitements and its tragedies, with an open and eager mind; she has, as she says, "opened every door" to the many avenues of her life; and here she sets down her account.

The reader may not find the first part of the book, with its account of Mrs. Popkin's newspaper career and her early press agent days, as interesting or convincing as the latter part, when, after her husband's death, she plunged into war and postwar work, much of it overseas. Her compulsion to do something for her fellow Jews in the war-torn countries and the new land in Israel made her find employment in difficult spots. It is her account of these days that give the book conviction and vitality, and reveal the best of strong character and understanding heart of the author.

THOMAS L. STOKES

Focus on Second Place

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER accepts the assignment to seek a second term with two obvious handicaps that were not present in his first quest for the White House in 1952.

One of them he can do nothing about; the other he could dispense with if he chooses.

The first is, of course, his health. On that subject he has been and continues to be most frank with the American people.

In his case, age must be coupled with health. He will be 66 on October 14, the height of the campaign.

He will be the oldest man to become a candidate for the presidency in our history with one exception, William Henry Harrison in 1840, who served only a month.

The second handicap, and it grows from the first, is his Vice President. That is, whether Richard M. Nixon would again be his running mate.

This immediately became the most burning issue within the party after the President yielded to intense pressure upon him for weeks and consented to renomination.

To Woo Democrats.

The Vice President is an issue because of the bitter antagonism he has aroused among Democrats who still constitute the biggest share of our voting population.

Republicans must again attract a considerable number of them, as in 1952, if they are to win this year. There are not enough Republicans to elect a President.

The Vice President ranks with Democrats chiefly because of the type of campaign he conducted against the party and individual Democrats seeking election to the Senate in the 1954 off-year congressional elections.

Republicans high in party councils want to replace him with someone less distasteful to Democrats and someone not likely to offer such a target as Democrats expect to make of Mr. Nixon if he is again on the ticket.

Some of the "Nixon-must-go" Republican leaders are motivated only by reasons of practical political strategy. They recognize that the President, himself, probably will not be as strong with the voters as the 1952 war hero fresh with his laurels for a number of reasons, including far more than there are.

They do not want to take risks of weakening the ticket in the vice presidential candidate.

Some Republicans just do not want to see the Vice President renominated because they do not want him in the line of succession to the presidency.

The anti-Nixon element got some slight encouragement from the failure of the President to commit himself to a Vice President's renomination when the opportunity was offered in a question put to him at his mammoth "decision day" news conference.

They felt the door was at least left open for them to try to get the President to drop him from the 1956 ticket when Mr. Eisenhower carefully pointed out that the nomination of a vice presidential candidate is a matter for the convention, and the convention does not pick a vice presidential candidate until after the candidate for President is selected.

And the convention, of course, is not until August at San Francisco.

The President decorated his vice president with his customary praise, though giving him a mild, indirect rebuke — when the matter was raised — for his description of Earl Warren as "the Republican Chief Justice."

In a speech listing the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision among accomplishments of the Republican party.

Not by Default.

It is plain that the "whether or no" about the vice presidential spot on the ticket henceforth will become the center of almost as much speculation as was the "whether or no" as to the President's own intentions.

And it is clear that the balance will swing now toward Mr. Nixon, now away from him.

The Vice President is not expected to let the preferred place get away from him by default. He is alert and shrewd in his own political interests and has many friends among local party leaders all over the country.

Differences among party leaders over the vice president could not subdue their excitement and exuberance over the President's decision. For most of them agree privately with the Vice President on one thing.

Which was his statement some months ago that the Republican party still is not strong enough to win on its own. It will take "like" to pull it through.

Willing to Gamble.

They are shutting out of their minds any doubts on the score of the President's health. They are willing to gamble on that.

Democrats privately recognize it as an issue that eventually may become more important than it now seems. Most Democratic party leaders were ready for the President's "yes" because of developments of the last few weeks indicating a trend that the President hardly would be able to resist, including the virtual decision by his panel of doctors in favor of his running again if he chose to do so.

The health question will persist. It raises the corollary question as to whether, if elected again, the President would be willing to gamble on that responsibility of what is now perhaps the single most important office in the world.

In recent weeks this question has been discussed by students of government who agree that the presidential office cannot be properly performed on a part-time basis and that there is no way in which the necessary duties of the office can be tailored to part-time management.

ICE CAPADES BACK, HANDSOME AS EVER

Version of 'Peter Pan' Well Done but May Be Too Long.

By MYLES STANDISH

Ice Capades of 1956, the perennial skating spectacle which John H. Harris has been offering for to these many years, came again to The Arena last night to an opening night crowd of 7188 spectators which I believe will be topped at the rest of its eight performances in the next six days, and proved again to be the big, handsome and expensive show we have been used to seeing from Mr. Harris.

The piece de resistance this year is an version of the musical version of James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan." This probably ranks with "Snow White" as the most successful of Mr. Harris's determined efforts to transfer musical comedy and operetta to the alien medium of ice skating.

Peter Pan and the Darling children floating through the air on thin piano wires—and they go pretty high, too—is perfect for the huge expanses of The Arena. The number gives a chance for diversified costuming.

First, Indians, that shaggy dog Nana and the crocodile, which undoubtedly will appeal to the children.

The songs from the stage show are pleasant, and seem to fit in pretty well with the action. As a matter of fact, there have been quite a few appropriate before in these quasi-musical productions as that of Donna Atwood.

As Peter Pan she mouths the recording of "I Wanna Crow," then dashes into the skating solo, a vivid release of beautifully controlled physical exuberance.

Incidentally, though it sounds like Mary Martin singing Donna's song on the sound-track, it isn't.

My only objection here is that while I don't doubt Mr. Harris is a past master at giving the people what they want, perhaps he has given them too much of what they want.

"Peter" runs 45 minutes, considering that much of that time is given to the skaters pirouetting about in a 45-minute instead of springing blithely from the earth as Shelley's skylark in the lovely free-gliding dynamism that ice skating generously gives us, that's a long time.

Ask me, if I'm so smart, how I'd cut down a 45-minute fragment that has already been skillfully compressed from a two and a half hour show. I'd say by making it a sort of expressionistic ballet on ice, picturing everything in terms of motion. Everyone knows the story anyway, and it can be explained to the kiddies. On ice, everything is visual. It is the flow of motion and eye-filling color that counts. The mouthed dialogue seems artificial. Ask any ice skater or ski enthusiast.

His thrill doesn't come from standing around and talking.

After 15 years with the show, Donna Atwood is said to be retiring after this tour at an age which can't be more than 31 or 32 or so, half of the mark used by many famous actresses and prima donnas for their farewell threats. I'll say she has never looked better. With a short-haircut, now blonde, she radiated the Peter Pan glow and athletically her skating is still great, although I imagine that by now those strenuous three-and-a-half-minute solos seem longer to her than they used to.

Anyway, this may be considered a fond salute, and I hope not a farewell one, to a tremendous performer and a fine and modest personality.

The rest of the show was up to its usual high standard. Eric Waite was back after an absence with some sure-fire clowning, and Larry Jackson and Bernie Lynum were just as happy as ever in the low-comedy league. The Australian Maxwells did some beautiful slow-motion comic balancing. Bobby Sneath was again the handsome personification of grace and vitality, and Alan Konrad's butterfly was ripped off with the same skill. Ravel's "Bolero" was given an imaginative treatment among more prosaic production numbers in gorgeous pink or smart black and white—I couldn't decide whether everything was going on inside a spectacular volcano or just a Jean Cocteau conception of Hades.

Pope Greeted on 80th Birthday By Children From Everywhere

Unidentified child presenting floral spray to POPE PIUS XII in ceremonies in the Vatican marking the Pope's eightieth birthday anniversary today.

VATICAN CITY, March 2 (AP)—Children from all parts of the world sang and danced around Pope Pius XII today to wish him a happy eightieth birthday.

The papal audience for the children was the first of many events today celebrating the Pontiff's birthday and the seventeenth anniversary of his election as spiritual head of the world's 450,000,000 Roman Catholics.

The major observance will be a pontifical mass in St. Peter's Basilica on Sunday, March 11, the day before the anniversary of his coronation as Pontiff.

The meeting with the children was held in the Vatican Palace's consistorial hall. Vatican officials said it was the first time a head of the church had held an audience.

The frail, white-clad Pope smiled and at times beat his hands gently to the rousing "Happy Birthday to You" sung in Italian "Tanti Auguri a Te." He beamed with pleasure when an Italian boy and girl brought him a white cake, topped with 80 candles and decorated with eight tiny, pink-eyed candy doves.

Preceding the cake bearers were four of the smallest children present, including a 2-year-old Italian girl who stumbled in her excitement.

Meanwhile 200 Italian school children—the boys in dark blue

State Medical Association Reports Successful Results of Experiment.

Successful results in a St. Louis experiment involving use of an antibiotic ointment to protect eyes of newborn infants against infection are reported in the current issue of Missouri Medicine, the journal of the Missouri State Medical Association.

In the experiment, conducted under auspices of the St. Louis Pediatric Society and the St. Louis Gynecological Society, Erythromycin ointment was used instead of the standard silver nitrate solution, which sometimes irritates the eyes and in some instances, when improperly used, has caused blindness.

The study, comparing effects of ointment and silver nitrate, indicated that Erythromycin greatly reduced the number of irritation cases, was stable for long periods without refrigeration, and was equally or more effective in guarding babies against gonococcal infection.

Authors of the Missouri Medicine report were Dr. H. Ewing Wachter of St. Joseph, a former St. Louis pediatrician, and Dr. Miriam M. Pennoyer, an instructor in pediatrics at Washington University School of Medicine.

Five hospitals—St. Luke's, St. Mary's, Jewish, St. Louis City and St. Louis Maternity—took part in the study. From March 1, 1953, to June 1, 1954, a total of 12,599 infants born at the hospitals were alternated as to the type of treatment employed.

Of the group, 5489 received 1 per cent silver nitrate and 7110 the antibiotic ointment.

Dr. Wachter and Dr. Pennoyer reviewed the history of eye prophylaxis for newborn infants, now required by law in Missouri and most other states, in the 75 years since the technique first was reported by Dr. Karl Sigmund Crede of Germany.

Silver Nitrate Treatment.

It was discovered by Dr. Crede that application of silver nitrate to babies' eyes, immediately after birth, brought dramatic reduction in incidence of ophthalmia neonatorum, then the leading cause of blindness. The practice has been mandatory in Missouri since 1921.

Silver nitrate has been of tremendous value, the reporting physicians noted, but because of dangers inherent in its use, and other factors, its eventual replacement by the sulfanamide drugs and antibiotics was logical. Several such substitutes, notably penicillin ointment, have been put to use successfully in the last eight years.

Objective of the St. Louis experiment, it was reported, was to develop a substitute that could be used throughout the state in home as well as hospital deliveries, and by mid-

Marsh's Steady Artistic Gains Shown in City Museum Exhibit

Draftsman in Him Transcends the Colorist, but Easel Painter Conquers the Illustrator.

By HOWARD DERRICKSON

Steady artistic growth of the late Reginald Marsh of New York in the last 25 years of his life is presented in a retrospective exhibition that opened today in two main-floor galleries at City Art Museum.

Marsh, painter, illustrator, mural painter, etcher, lithographer, engraver and teacher—died in 1954 at the age of 56.

Organized and circulated by New York's Whitney Museum of American Art, the show comprises loans from private collectors and major American museums, including the Whitney, the Brooklyn, Chicago's Art Institute, Buffalo's Albright Art Gallery, Philadelphia's Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and St. Louis's City Art Museum.

The touring collection, which will leave here April 1 for Dallas, should be one of the city's most popular displays in recent years. Its virtues are Marsh's mastery of the human figure and his exploitation of this talent, rare among contemporary artists, in easily comprehensible subject matter, chiefly New York's pleasure-seeking crowds.

Draftsman and Colorist.

Comparison of these 70-odd pictures in many mediums suggests that the draftsman in Marsh consistently transcended the colorist, though his palette took on subtlety and freshness in his final years. Witness the restrained color, integrated with contour, in "Matinee" (1952), compared with "Steepchase Park" (1936), where the garish hues are extraneous elements, though they do suit the subject's claustrophobic gaiety.

Toward the end of his career, the easel painter in Marsh was conquering the illustrator.

His design grows much finer in his prints, which he did in his studio at night. Often these are pruned-down versions of his paintings and drawings or single figures scooped from them, such as the handsome cover design for the exhibition's excellent catalogue.

This booklet runs to 71 pages, contains 52 reproductions, two in color, and is on sale at the museum for $1.25 a copy.

There are gains in expressive power in "White Tower Hamburger," a 1945 drawing, and in three pictures begun in 1952—"The Bowery at Pell Street," in egg tempera, "The Bowery" and "Bathing, Pick-a-Back," both in Chinese ink, possibly Marsh's best medium.

His worst was oil, as illustrated by the muddy-toned "Hudson Burlesk, Union City, N. J." Marsh the skilled draftsman and adept composer of multiple figures is seen to advantage, however, in the St. Louis museum's "Ten Shots, Ten Cents."

The Artist at His Best.

This large and fluent composition is in water color, in which the artist worked with ease from the first. It was painted in 1939 and bought in 1941. Seen against the touring show's representative sampling of Marsh's work, "Ten Shots, Ten Cents," is an outstanding picture and characteristic of the artist at his best.

There is a certain sameness to Marsh's shuttling between Skid Row and Coney Island. As this objection was expressed at yesterday's preview for the museum "Friends," his paintings "might have improved in composition if only he had got away from New York's crowds once in a while."

As Combes Sees It.
HARRY COMBES, coach of the fighting Illini, who have been riding high for most of the season, believes Iowa should rate as the favorite in the Big Ten showdown game on television tomorrow afternoon at Iowa City.

The men who establish the point odds seem to be agreed by two points.

"After all," Combes says, "Iowa basically is the same team that defeated us twice last season, 92 to 80 at Iowa City and 89 to 70 in Huff Gym."

"Now, to have to play a single game on Iowa's home floor puts a heavy burden on this Illinois team which has been playing under some terrific pressure for a month."

Moreover, Combes continues, Iowa is a great ball-handling team while "we have been making too many fundamental mistakes. We can't do that Saturday and expect to have a chance."

Illinois, however, expects to be physically at a peak. Bill Ridley's aching back has improved and minor injuries of other players are said to be inconsequential.

The highest scoring offense in Big Ten history is the weapon the Illini hope to use against the Hawkeyes. In 12 games Illinois has averaged 93.5 points, while holding the opposition to 76.1 for a 17-point spread. Comparative figures for Iowa are 79.4 to 70.1 for a 9.3 average margin.

Each contender, currently owning an 11-1 league mark, will have another game to play Monday—Illinois at Northwestern and Iowa at home to Indiana. But Illinois' game at Iowa City seems likely to be the game that will settle the matter.

Here and There.
WHAT kind of All-American is it that doesn't give Missouri's Norm Stewart a single point, a fan asks.

Somebody forgot. . . . Oklahoma A. & M. is a three-point favorite over St. Louis U., which will be trying to win the Missouri Valley Conference championship by winning the game at Stillwater tomorrow night. . . . Don Boldebeck's conference-winning scoring average of 23.9 is second in the records below Tulsa Bob Patterson's 30.5 mark set last season.

New York basketball writer Leonard Koppelt let the big-town people know Washington University appears to be hoping for an N.I.T. bid. . . . If St. Louis U. should fail in its N.C.A.A. berth quest and go to the N.I.T., a Bears-Bills encounter in the first round would make some "copy," both here and in New York.

Artie Ellers, Missouri Valley commissioner, is having trouble lining up a suitable site for a playoff game, if one is necessary, but is determined to find one. . . . Sites at Wichita, Tulsa, Hutchinson, Kan., Kansas City and Oklahoma City are all unavailable for the desirable date, the weekend of March 10, because of previous tourney schedules. . . . However, Stillwater, Okla., is a possibility and after the game between the Billikens and Aggies tomorrow night, Ellers, the Houston coach or athletic director and Hickey will get together to arrange for a match in case of a tie in the standings. . . .

Wichita will entertain the N.C.A.A. first round games (Southern Methodist vs. Texas Tech and Oklahoma City U. vs. Memphis State) on March 13—further complicating the Valley playoff idea. . . . Memphis State was transferred to the western regional, so DePaul goes in the eastern half of the N.C.A.A. setup.

Brotherly League.
THE Missouri Valley Conference never may become known as the league of brotherly love, but Stan Mockler of the United Press St. Louis office notes that it threatens to become quite brotherly.

Phil Dymann, sports publicist for St. Louis, is half of one of the four "brother acts" in the conference. His brother, Jim, has a corresponding job at Tulsa U.

The mothers of the Dymanns, Mockler reports, has a neat solution to this division in her offices. When St. Louis visits Tulsa for a game, Mother Dymann, who lives in Kansas City, attends as Jim's guest and is one of the loudest Golden Hurricane supporters. When Tulsa plays at St. Louis, Mrs. Dymann is a Billiken fan throughout the game.

Other brother combinations in Valley basketball are the well-known Thins—Clarence, coach at Tulsa, and Henry, coach at Oklahoma A. & M.—and the Millers at Wichita. Ralph Miller is head coach of the Shockers, brother Dick is his assistant.

A fourth set of brothers is at Tulsa where Glenn and Bobby Dodds are athletic director and football coach respectively.

St. Louis Derby Winner Wins at Hot Springs
HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 2 (UP)—Enni Denemark's Prince Eric broke from second place in the stretch and romped across the finish line to capture the $2600 feature run for four-year-olds. (Prince Eric won the St. Louis Derby at Cahokia last fall.)

Jockey J. D. Jessop moved Prince Eric 3 1/2 lengths ahead of the second-place horse, Mrs. Elizabeth Mueckler's Lord Henry, which went to the post the favorite.

Four lengths back in show position was H. H. Mundy's Bobbelle. Prince Eric ran the six furlongs in the season's fastest time here, 1:11, to pay $6.80 to win, $3.40 place and $2.60 show.

Redbirds Must Improve Three Positions Besides Pitching

Shortstop, Catch and First Base Need Help

By J. Roy Stockton
Post-Dispatch Sports Editor.
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 2 — Fred Hutchinson, new manager of the Cardinals, looked at his full squad for the first time yesterday, as spring training officially opened, and started the job of trying to fashion a flock of veteran and young talent into a pennant contender.

Hutchinson and Frank Lane, the general manager, know about the task ahead and the problems. But they believed the Cardinals of last season were much better than a seventh-place ball club, and while they are too realistic to talk about a pennant, they indicate plainly that they will be disappointed as the fans if the Redbirds don't climb into the first division.

There are definite and numerous problems, however. The new manager must find a first baseman, a shortstop and a catcher besides solving the No. 1 problem of recent years, pitching. Also, management realizes that more batting power is necessary, as well as tighter defense than the club had last year.

Mr. Lane's Evaluation.
"Hutchinson and I know about the problems, all right," Lane said, after expressing satisfaction over the fact that not one player was missing as the varsity squad jogged from the clubhouse to the turf of Al Lang Field.

"We just have to solve that situation at first base. We know we'll have a lot about playing first base during the winter. But we know, too, that he represents a conversion job and that perhaps we'd be better if Tom Alston or Joe Cunningham could crowd Moon back to outfield status."

"We have a lot of infield talent, but you can only play one man at a position. The short stop has to bat as well as field. And we need more power. So we'll have to weigh all factors as Hutchinson decides whether it will be Alex Grammas, Dick Schofield, Don Blasingame, or the long shot, Jackie Brandt."

Lane was asked if he and Hutchinson had considered the possibility of an infield shift that might send Ken Boyer to shortstop, with Brandt, if he continues to shine as an infielder, moving to third base.

"Hutch and I are both highly pleased with the way Brandt has taken to the infield experiment," Lane replied. "And Brandt certainly will be kept in the picture as the best possible combination is sought."

Brandt Must Learn.
Brandt looked so smooth at third base in a squad game that observers recalled that Boyer had played a lot of shortstop in spring training a year ago. In fact, during the 1955 training period many observers considered Boyer the best shortstop as well as the best third baseman in camp.

Brandt, however, will be given every opportunity to learn about shortstop. The most difficult tricks still are before the young man. One of the toughest things for a shortstop to learn is to move to the bag, take a throw, be sure to step on the base and then avoid the blocking base runner to make the relay to first on double plays. Usually as a shortstop new to the job is learning that trick, he'll stumble over the bag a few times, miss the completely occasionally, and collide head-on with the base runner. They're taking the instruction course slowly. They don't want to give Brandt too much to learn at a time.

In trying to solve the catching problem, there isn't much leeway. Hal Smith will have to make it as the No. 1 catcher if that department is to be improved. Walker Cooper, veteran catcher serving on the roster and as a backup, likes what he has seen of young Smith. But if Hal doesn't make it, the situation will be about as it was last year, which nobody considered good.

Cooper will do some catching, but if he works in 25 games he will have given as much service behind the plate as anybody expects.

Last, But Not Least.
Pitching is probably the most consistently uncertain thing in the baseball picture and only time will tell what the staff is this year. But Vinegar Bend Mizell is back and others should be better than they were last season. Harvey Hadix won't be tipping his pitches and should be a 20-game winner. Larry Jackson, Tom Poholsky, Willard Schmidt, Luis Arroyo, and some of the young strong-armed hurlers could brighten the picture. And if Frank Smith can come back and Ellis Kinder hasn't lost his bullpen magic, the relief pitching should be an asset this year.

"We're going to make it slowly," was the way Hutchinson summed up his plans. "There's a lot of talent here. We will wait and see. There'll be no snap decision on any of our potential assets."

Cardinals' Manager Gets His First Look at Main Squad

FREDDIE HUTCHINSON (kneeling at left) gets an eyeful of Redbirds as the regular squad gathers for its first official workout at the St. Petersburg, Fla., spring training camp. Prior to March 1, only rookies and "invited" players were in action. With 12 men brought up from the "school" camp, there are now 53 players working under the direction of Manager Hutchinson and his ample staff of coaches.

Doby of White Sox and McMillan of Redlegs Wear Glasses . . . Ford Out to Prove He's a 20-Game Winner.

TAMPA, Fla., March 2 (UP)—Larrupin' Larry Doby, the answer to the Chicago White Sox' long prayer for a long-ball hitter, peered solemnly through his new eyeglasses and said flatly, "we can win the pennant if I have a good year."

That's just the way the White Sox feel, too, and the big reason why they obtained him from the Cleveland Indians in that big winter deal for Shortstop Chicago Carrasquel.

Doby, 31, donned a Sox uniform for the first time yesterday and then surprised a few observers by also donning a pair of "specs" for what club officials described as a slight astigmatism. Then he picked up that big bat and started tuning up.

Doby didn't consider last year much of a season, for he hit only 26 homers—more than any member of the Sox—and batted .291.

As the teams swung into the second day of official spring training today, the list of hold-outs on each team is now official. Here it is:

Brooklyn Dodgers—Shortstop Chico Fernandez.
Pittsburgh Pirates—First Baseman George Crowe.
Baltimore Orioles—Outfielder Roberto Clemente.
Cleveland Indians—Second Baseman Bobo Avila.
Detroit Tigers—Shortstop Harvey Kuehn, First Baseman Earl Torgeson.
New York Yankees—Second Baseman Billy Martin, Pitcher Jim Konstanty.

Also unsigned, but not considered holdouts are Philter Curt Simmons of the Phillies, who won't talk salary until workouts show his fitness; Pitcher John Andre of the Cubs, who'll sign on arrival; and First Baseman Roy Sievers of Washington, given permission to remain home with his ailing mother.

Around the other camps: Manager Mike Higgins of the Red Sox said Ted Williams will be allowed to "redesign himself" and will take it easy to avoid injuries like the broken collarbone he suffered in the '52 training camp. . . . Gene Woodling finally got a cut to $28,000 with the Indians. . . .

Glants said Foster Castleman is leading the big battle for second base. . . . Roy McMillan, Cincinnati shortstop, joined Doby in the spectacles shift. . . .

Southpaw Whitey Ford of the Yankees vowed to prove this year that "I'm a 20-game pitcher." . . . Manager Walt Alston said the Dodgers are set at all positions except second and third base and left field. . . .

Rookie Southpaw Veston (Bunky) Stewart of Washington broke a toe in sliding practice. . . . And peppy Manager Bobby Bragan of Pittsburgh told his players to be aggressive base runners "when you get to first base. I want you to be thinking in terms of getting to third base." Johnson-Liston Bout Canceled
PHILADELPHIA, March 2 (UP)—The Pennsylvania Athletic Commission announced today that the Harold Johnson-Sonny Liston fight set for next Tuesday in Pittsburgh has been canceled.

Commission Secretary Jack Saunders listed illness as the reason Johnson could not go through with the light heavyweight bout that already had become the center of a court case. The case arose Wednesday when Tommy Loughrey filed suit to restrain Johnson from boxing, contending he had an "exclusive" four-year managerial contract with the fighter.

Loughrey, who said the contract was signed in March of 1954, was replaced last September when Johnson announced he signed Pat Oliveri as his new manager. At the time, Loughrey was under a six-month suspension for not reporting Johnson's condition prior to the Johnson-Julio Mederos "bitter orange" bout on May 8, 1955. Loughrey's suspension expired in January. The commission officially recognized Oliveri as Johnson's manager on Feb. 10.

Furgol Shoots 34, Challenges Leader Burke

BATON ROUGE, La., March 2 (AP)—Jackie Burke Jr., nursing a one-stroke lead and an aching back, today faced a challenge from Ed Furgol for the lead in the $12,500 Baton Rouge Open golf tournament.

Burke, Klamath Lake, N.Y., was a late starter today. He fired a record-equaling 7-under-par 65 yesterday in the opening round over the 6450-yard, par-72 Baton Rouge Country Club course. He shares the tournament record with three others.

Furgol, veteran St. Louis professional had a 33-33—36 yesterday. In his first round today, he shot a two-under par 34, missing a three-foot putt on the ninth hole which would have given him another 33.

Cary Middlecoff, of Dallas, 1955 Augusta Masters champion and a double-winner in winter tournaments, ran into trouble on his first nine today. He narrowly missed three straight putts, then hit an iron shot behind a tree, a recovery shot into a trap and wound up with a bogey six on the next hole. He finished the first nine with a 3-over-par 39.

Middlecoff has a 70 yesterday.

Bunched at 67 were amateur Rod Funseth of Spokane, Wash.; George Bayer of Cincinnati, who tied the record course with a 31 on the first nine before running into trouble on the back side; Shelley Mayfield of Westbury, N.Y., and Harry Dee of Hartsdale, N.Y.

Billiken Pep Rally.
A pep rally was scheduled by St. Louis University students for 3:45 this afternoon at the university gymnasium. West Pine near Spring avenue, to wish the Billikens well in their decisive basketball game tomorrow night at Stillwater, Okla. The Bills will leave by bus from the gym for the airport at 4 o'clock. Venice, Soells Win Games in Munny Play-Offs

The Soells and Venice A.C. won their second-round games in the Munny basketball double elimination playoffs but both had to come from behind to emerge victorious. Soells defeated Fix Mix, 99-88, and Venice trimmed St. Louis Health Club, 97-91, in the doubleheader at Hadley gym.

Venice remained unbeaten in the playoffs by its triumph. Soells lost to Venice in its first-round game a week ago.

MIAMI, Fla., March 2.

THE unfrocking of Wes Santee by the Amateur Athletic Union has exercised the untamed press of this area at least as violently as it has aroused law-givers in Washington, farmers in Kansas and members of the Eighth Avenue Country Club set in Stillman's Gym. It seems generally agreed that the A.A.U. has mishandled the case with a bumbling, ponderous ineptitude unmatched this side of Puerto Rico where, Conn. McCree reports, there is a jockey who boasts with pardonable pride that he has been ruled off for life 13 times.

Santee is a highly personable young man whom the A.A.U. has subjected to continued public embarrassment by unnecessarily dragging out the inquiries into his expense accounts, first suspending him on charges of professionalism, then reinstating him, then reversing this reversal and expelling him forever from the company of the pure and unsullied.

There is wide sympathy for Santee personally because it appears that honesty was his unforgivable sin; if he had not given an accurate accounting of expense monies received from assorted promoters of track meets, he might never have been accused of accepting excessive payments.

In this year of Olympic foreboding, disqualification of America's fastest mile runner from amateur competition is deemed especially untimely; pinheadesque, that the A.A.U. has made the United States look utterly ridiculous in foreign eyes.

Above all, the editorial thunder of the sports pages are shaken by what they consider a threat to one of the most sacred of American institutions—the swindle sheet.

Low-Cost Ivory Housing.

HOW, they are demanding, in voices lifted to catch the attention of their publishers, can the A.A.U. expect the meanness of God's creatures to say nothing of an athlete, gentleman and officer of the Marine Corps—to live and travel on a meagerly pitiful $12 a day? Is that ivory to be hermetically sealed and soundproofed so the high priests of amateurism have never heard of inflation?

Nothing so inspires editorial eloquence, so stirs literary imagination, as a discussion of expense accounts, especially a discussion that promises to catch the attention of the boss.

This is particularly true down here, where a room commanding a view of Biscayne Bay costs $20 a day and the price goes to $31 if the deck clerk smiles.

Even sportswriters, a breed of monkish and ascetic tastes who are known to keep the financial interests of their employers always uppermost in their minds, require an allowance several times greater than the A.A.U.'s per diem limit to cover such bare necessities, as stone crabs at Joe's on the beach, steaks and resin potatoes at Black Caesar's Forge and a modest excursion to Nassau for bone fishing.

Classic Condolences.

THE situation is not, of course, peculiar to this region. It never was. Years ago an assignment in the Far North led Gene Fowler to compose an expense account that has survived in American newspaper literature as "Hamlet," has endured in English letters.

Even in the frozen wastelands, Mr. Fowler discovered, the cost of inside straight and anti-freeze compound can be prohibitive. Though never an unimaginative man, he found upon attempting to reach an account goal that he had missed by several hundred dollars.

Pouring himself three fingers of truth serum, he tried again. This time he included a substantial rental for a dog team and sledge, which anybody knows are indispensable to a reporter in the frostbite belt. Even that was insufficient for his needs. Sadly he added a notation that the lead dog had succumbed to the rigors of the journey, and he listed an item of $100 recompense for the noble beast's owner. Still having failed to cross over to the alkaline side, he dashed off the line that will live forever:

"Flowers for bereaved bitch, $50."

The Creative Urge.

EQUALLY inspired was the accounting drafted by Chicago's late Bob Casey when his office demanded that he itemize a $10 bill which he had submitted for checking on a report that a wolf was at large in nearby Hammond, Ind. He broke it down like this:

"Rail fare to Hammond, 5 cents; rent of car, 5 cents; gas for same, 5 cents; oil for same, 15 cents; it was an oil eater; rental of glasses to look at wolf, 5 cents;" and so on until his total came to $9.75. The final item required no amplification: "Wolfbane, 25 cents."

After the Evening Ledger folded in Philadelphia and Al Horwita, a disfranchised sports writer, was cast bodily into the motion picture business, his new boss rejected his first swindle sheet as obscenely modest.

"Always remember," the man said sternly, "that the only creative part of this business is the expense account."

Santee to Run in K. of C. Meet Under Writ Staying A.A.U.

Hearing on Bar to Be Next Week

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—Controversial runner Wes Santee returns to competition tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden with the blessing of a State Supreme Court Justice and the approval of the Knights of Columbus track officials.

A court injunction signed yesterday by Justice James McNally and followed several hours later by a statement from K. of C. meet director, Tom Harrigan, paved the way for the return of the 24-year-old athlete.

Santee, the United States' fastest mile at 4:00.5 and this country's chief 1500-meter hope in the Melbourne Olympics, was handed a life suspension Feb. 19 by the Amateur Athletic Union's Executive Committee.

The A.A.U. action came after a special investigating committee charged the former University of Kansas runner with accepting $1235 in excess of allowable expenses to run in a number of meets, including three in California. The committee also charged $1100 was paid to his wife, contrary to A.A.U. rules. The investigating group presented a 40-page list of particulars to the Executive Committee, which voted 14-1 for suspension.

Court Hearing March 9.

At Quantico, Va., where he is on duty as a Marine lieutenant, Santee said, "I've been training for it the mile" despite the A.A.U. bar. In the K. of C. meet, he'll again oppose Ron Delany of Villanova, who has ruled the mile rout all season. Charles P. Grimes, Santee's attorney who sought the temporary injunction, said Wes would arrive in New York today. Justice McNally set March 9 as the date for the hearing on the injunction. On that decision likely will determine whether Santee will be permitted to run in meets at Cleveland, Chicago and Milwaukee later this month.

The A.A.U. had no immediate comment on the Knights of Columbus decision to abide by an invitation, which its statement said was extended to Santee on Jan. 19 and later accepted by the runner.

But after the injunction was signed Secretary-Treasurer Dan Ferris said:

"Now that the injunction has been granted, maybe the people involved will have enough sense to do the right thing."

Promoters May Be on Spot.

The day following Santee's suspension and after Grimes had warned of his plans for an anti-injunction suit, Santee met promoters that Santee's entry in a meet—even with an injunction—would not be accepted. At the same time Ferris advised meet directors they would face loss of A.A.U. sanction "forever" if they permitted the Kansas to compete and that any athlete participating in a meet with Santee would jeopardize his amateur status.

The A.A.U. rules forbid an amateur to compete against professionals.

While A.A.U. officials declined immediate comment, other track experts noted out the unavailability of the International Olympic Committee barring athletes who compete in the same meet with Santee.

Justice McNally, in handing down his decision after an hour and a half hearing, said he felt that the A.A.U. could suffer no harm from such an injunction while "irreparable harm" might be done Santee.

While I believe the A.A.U. acted in good faith," added the justice, "I feel, however, that the plaintiff has made out a case in his papers sufficient for me to grant a preliminary injunction."

Jay-Ehret Mahoney, counsel for the A.A.U., said in opposing the injunction that Santee had not exhausted his remedies within the constitutional framework of the A.A.U.

He said Santee had the privilege of going before the A.A.U. board of governors with an appeal but that he had declined to do so. He said competition as an A.A.U. member was a "privilege and not a right."

Hawks' Coach Finds Protesting Referee's Call Can Be Costly

By Harold Flachsbart

A lot of things happened to the Hawks last night at the Washington U. Field House. Most of them had—and a lot of reasons could be advanced for a one-point defeat at the hands of the Rochester Royals, a swift-moving team trying to close in on St. Louis for an NBA playoff berth.

It was a "lost night" in the dog-fight down to the season's finish, for Minneapolis, scoring an upset 102-100 victory at Philadelphia, took second place in the Western standings with a full game margin over the Hawks, now 27-35 for the season and only two percentage points ahead of the clutch-performing Royals.

"Missing the boat" in a contest that could have kept the St. Louis club tied for second place and even a possible threat for the top spot, the Hawks were nosed out, 95-94, because, as Coach Red Holzman aptly put it, "The Royals out-bustled us."

There was a questionable official's call at the close of a rather unimpressive third quarter (from the Hawks' point of view), Holzman, other Hawks and quite a few of the 3866 spectators complained about the call—but all the complaints didn't change a three-point situation for Rochester which won the game for the visitors.

Twyman's Goal Disputed. Jack Twyman, 6-foot-6 pro up from the University of Cincinnati, hooked one through the cords either at or after the buzzer sounded the end of the period. Holzman was so critical of Referee Mendy Rudolph's ruling that the basket counted that he drew a technical foul. The Hawks, who had trailed only by one point at that stage, suddenly were four behind when Twyman's basket stood and Don Meineke sank the free throw awarded on the technical foul.

The Hawks, not as sharp as in their Sunday appearance against New York at Kiel Auditorium, bounced back in the last period tempted drive-in from the corner.

And believe it or not, the Hawks got the ball again and Jack McMahon had a chance with seven seconds to go but more or less "threw" the ball toward the backboard instead of laying it up there, with a possible resulting foul against the visitors.

Holzman, who must take blame for the technical foul that, in effect, beat his team, pointed out that the players had been instructed to call "time out" if they gained the ball in the last seconds, and so McMahon was in the doghouse for that offense of not calling time.

Pettit's Total 27.

Pettit, who shot his season's average, blamed himself for "letting the team down" with a 27-point performance, but even the master shooter from Louisiana State can't carry the load by himself all the time.

Maurice Stokes, Rochester's clever jumping jack and a sure choice for "rookie-of-the-year" honors that Pettit won in his first season last winter, made 24 points for Rochester and snared 15 rebounds. Pettit latched onto 22 rebounds.

Said Coach Holzman: "Let's forget about this one and get Fort Wayne Saturday night." That's an 8:30 game at Washington field house, too.

Preachers Go After Concordia Tourney Title

Concordia Seminary, which over the years has had a happy habit of coming up with its best basketball in the annual Concordia invitational tournament, will test its talent and tradition tonight and tomorrow in season-ending games at Springfield, Ill.

The Preachers, who have won four of the last five Concordia tourney championships, will play the Concordia College Bulldogs of Seward, Neb., tonight after a contest between Concordia of River Forest, Ill., and Concordia of Springfield.

The St. Louis team has a 10-10 season's record. Seward, runnerup in the Nebraska C.C.C. conference, has won 12 of 18 and River Forest is Badger-Illini conference champions on the strength of 17 victories in 22 starts.

Two Seward standouts are Bob Otte and Dave Fascholz, younger brothers of former Preacher stars here, Jerry Otte and Jack Fascholz.

The second game of the championship series will be played next Wednesday at the Naval Air Station, Lambert field.

Utah and Wayne Get N.C.A.A. Tourney Berths, 10 Still Open

NEW YORK, March 2 (UPI)—Former champion Utah and dark-horse Wayne University of Detroit landed berths in the N.C.A.A. tournament today as that big basketball carnival drove to complete its lineup.

The Utes, who won the N.C.A.A. crown in 1944 in one of the tourney's biggest surprises, qualified for this year's fray last night by clinching the Skyline Conference championship with a 91-60 rout of Colorado A. & M. at Salt Lake City.

Wayne, with a 16-1 over-all record that includes a 15-game winning streak, was named as a "member at large." Utah draws a first-round pass and will play its first game at Corvallis, Ore., March 16, against the winner of the Idaho State-Seattle first-rounder. Wayne will meet De Paul in a first-round game at Fort Wayne, Ind., March 12.

The N.C.A.A. also announced the following first-round pairings for the regional eliminations at New York, March 12-13: Holy Cross vs. Temple; Canisius vs. Atlantic Coast Conference champion; Connecticut vs. Manhattan; member-at-large (bid will be offered to Ivy League champion, if decided in time) vs. Southern Conference champion.

Addition of Utah and Wayne fills 15 of the 25 N.C.A.A. berths. Still open are one member-at-large place (the one in New York) and nine conference championship berths.

Utah easily clinched its second straight Skyline title, gaining revenge for an earlier loss to Colorado A. & M. this season. Art Bunte paced the Redskins with 28 points, including three baskets in the second half and break the game open after Utah had taken a 44-37 halftime margin.

The tourneys to decide the Atlantic Coast and Southern Conference champions move to the semifinal stage tonight. In the Atlantic Coast at Raleigh,

5845 Teams to Seek Honors in A.B.C. Tourney

ROCHESTER, N.Y., March 2 (AP)—Bowling's world series, the fifty-third annual American Bowling Congress's tournament, swings into action tomorrow in Rochester's bright and shining war memorial—an indoor sports palace now in its first season of use.

A total of 5845 teams from 41 states and three foreign countries will have rolled by the time the tourney closes May 20. This is the fifth largest entry list in the history of the A.B.C. and the largest ever east of Detroit.

The host city of Rochester will parade 1534 teams to the 40-alley layout and the city's largest industry, Eastman Kodak, has set a new industrial record by entering 312 teams.

The Heffers from Detroit, the open division team winners in three of the past four years, will defend their championship March 14. They hit 3136 pins last year.

A member of the championship team, Fred Bujack, will be defending champion in the all-events division. He won a year ago at Indianapolis with a total of 1993.

Other defending champs, with last year's winning totals, include Eddie Gerzine of Milwaukee in singles, 738, and George Pacropis and Harry Zoeller of Wilkes Barre, Pa., in doubles, 1365.

The white and liver colored pointer owned by Jimmy Hinton of Tuscaloosa, Ala., was picked over 36 other bird dogs that ran in this "world series" of the formal quail hunt circuit.

The new national champ ran his title-winning three-hour quail hunt for the judges Wednesday. He was handled by Clyde Morton of Alberta, Ala.

Palamonium turned in several beautifully handled beaves without a serious error. It was the tenth dog Morton had guided to the nation's top field trial crown, a record matched by no other professional trainer.

Morton carried off the $1500 prize money, which always goes to the pro who handles the winner. Hinton took possession of the nation's big silver trophy for one year.

Palamonium is the son of a champion. His sire was Paladin, who won the national twice.

Beagle Sanction Trials. The Eastern Missouri Beagle Club will hold Plan A sanction trials tomorrow and Sunday at the August A. Busch Wildlife area at Weldon Spring. Thirteen-inch class beagles will run the first day and J-5-inches Sunday. Sanction trials are preliminaries to licensed trials. Judges will be Johnnie Norcutt, Thomas Herriman, Theodore Zeiss and Vince Gavin.

AVERAGE PRICE FOR STOCKS AT A RECORD HIGH

Figures Are Those of Associated Press Price Index — Dow-Jones Industrial Stock Index Alone at New Top.

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—The stock market advanced to a new record high level today in a strong rise led by the oil shares.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up $1.40 at $181.60, the highest level in the history of the stock market. The average established a record high Sept. 23 of $181.50, just before it plunged down in a major reaction brought on by news of President Eisenhower's heart attack.

It recovered swiftly from the fall and touched the same record high of $181.50 on Dec. 5 and 6. Since then the market has been somewhat under the old peaks.

A rise of more than two weeks was climaxed today with a break through to another historic high peak for the averages.

The United Press said stocks closed the week of the Eisenhower "yes" decision on a strong note with the market at new Dow-Jones 1956 highs.

Dow-Jones Industrials reached a record high. Rises were at their best since last December. Utilities neared their 1956 high.

The industrial component of the average was up $1.60 at a new high of $258.60, railroads were up $1.80 at $138, and the utilities were head 30 cents at $74.20.

The oils were joined in the advance by the railroads, steels, coppers, chemicals, and many industrial issues. The metals and aircrafts, however, were mixed to lower.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were numerous, and some stocks pushed up even more.

There were 1,139 individual issues traded of which 648 advanced and 295 declined with 80 new highs and 4 new lows for the year record.

Trading amounted to 2,860,000 shares as compared with 2,410,000 shares traded yesterday.

Borg-Warner was up between 1 and 2 points as directors raised the dividend payment to 60 cents from 50 cents paid in previous quarters.

Panhandle Oil was down a small fraction after directors decided on temporary deferment of dividend consideration.

Warner Bros. was down between 1 and 2 points after starting on 5500 shares off 7 1/2 at 22 1/2. The company agreed to sell 750 features and a number of short subjects for $21,000,000 to PRM Inc.

BUSINESS AND THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP). BUSINESS rather expects to be one of the many issues in the Presidential campaign.

The enthusiasm voiced by many top industrialists and financiers over President Eisenhower's decision to run again sounded mostly one note: It would bolster business confidence.

The business leaders appeared to accept the belief widely held—rightly or wrongly—that this is a "businessman's administration."

Opponents of the Administration may be expected to step up their charges—right or wrong—that Washington's policies of the last three years have tended to favor the interests of business, to make "big business" bigger and to make competition rough for small business.

Both points of view will be exaggerated in the political campaign. But no matter how intemperate the claims or the charges may become, "business" and its place in the nation's well being seem almost sure to become one of the issues.

BUSINESS HAS BEEN INCREASINGLY SENSITIVE about its position and about public opinion in the last 20 years or so. Particularly since World War II, business leaders have tried hard to "get the business story across"—to make the rank and file of the citizenry understand that healthy business means a generally healthy nation, that business wasn't a wholly selfish thing but had the general welfare at heart, too. New terms for capitalism were coined: "private enterprise" or the "incentive system." Speakers from the world of business have stressed the virtues and advantages of the system from one end of the land to the other.

AND MANY BUSINESS LEADERS FEEL THAT THEY have made considerable progress in laying the old biases about "big business" and about financiers whose motto was "the public be damned." Business leaders realize that the present business setup was put for a test when several top leaders of business moved into leading posts in Washington three years ago and announced that the climate for business would be favorable. Industrialists are quick to give to this a good deal of the credit for the good times that blossomed last year—doubters think that many other factors had equal or greater weight in turning the recession into a boom.

INDUSTRIALISTS WHO BELIEVE THAT THE prosperous times show what business can do when given a freer hand fret something like confidence, turn the economy downward and our electorate. Most of them realize all the other factors working for upward or downward turns of the business cycle, but know that other issues will be hotly debated during the political campaign and may capture more of the public's interest, but many expect that as the campaign progresses there will be a change in the attitude of the nation, an attitude of "be kind to business" or one of "police business closely lest it grab too big a share."

BUSINESSMEN, WITH FEW EXCEPTIONS, BELIEVE that their postwar record has been good, that their present activities are more helpful than not, that their plans for future growth of industry and trade are the nation's best bet for good times in the years ahead. But they also know that not everyone agrees with them. And in this campaign, perhaps more than in most, they expect to be under scrutiny.

GRANITE CITY STEEL CO. BUILDING NEW FURNACE

A new and larger blast furnace is being built at Granite City Steel Co., Granite City, to replace one of the plant's two furnaces which has been in almost continuous operation since 1920, it was announced today.

The shell of the new furnace, to be 171 feet high and weigh 600 tons, is being erected on a platform 50 feet from the old furnace. When it is dismantled, the new one will be moved on steel rollers to the old furnace's foundation.

prison two months. Chile is in the process of implementing the plan to halt inflation devised by the United States management consultant firm of Klein & Saks. Blest has spent the last two months in contemplation, and prayer and in daily lectures on the virtues of the Christian life. These lectures have been delivered to youthful delinquents among his fellow prisoners especially, but by now they are attended by hardened criminals and by the prison guards—and on visiting days by union members from outside the prison as well.

Gift From Mother. The Archbishop of Chile is 89 years old and too ill now to visit Blest in prison but he regularly sends his secretary and other priests to visit the labor leader. Blest's mother also is too old to go to prison every week—she is 81. The most important moment during the visiting hour at the prison yesterday, however, was when a union member delivered to Blest a small brown paper sack from his mother containing six eggs.

"Everyone is wonderful to me here in prison," Blest said, "but I am having a little stomach trouble. These eggs will give me new strength."

Blest, who is 51 years old but appears much older, has never married. He has devoted his entire life to the Chilean labor movement and is known among his followers as the "Red Christ."

"I have learned much in prison," Blest said. "It has been a great experience. The chief thing I have learned is the advantage of faith. Materialism cannot stand up against faith. I have been reading, both the Bible and the teachings of Gandhi. From both I have learned all over again the superiority of spiritual strength over material force."

As he spoke Blest's blue eyes shone. He is a small, ragged, unkempt man with broken teeth and an unshaven face. Only his eyes reveal something of the power he holds over the masses of Chilean people.

"From Christ and Gandhi I have learned that violence never is good," Blest said. "And while reading and praying here I have cleansed my conscience. I have a clean conscience. I fight only for justice—and I fight without violence."

Denies Being Red. Blest said he was entirely outside the politics of Chile. He denied vehemently that he was a Communist.

"How can I be a Communist? I am a Catholic. It may be that I agree with some of the ideas of Communism. The early Christians were in a sense Communists. If everyone would follow the teachings of Christ I am sure there would be no capitalism.

"Didn't Christ say that it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter Heaven? If everyone would live Christianity there would be no wars."

"The important thing is what takes place inside a man. The transformation of mankind cannot be imposed from the outside."

Asked about his trip to Russia in 1953, Blest said: "It was very interesting. The people seemed happy and to be enjoying a good standard of living—but of course I only saw what they showed me. Didn't even speak the language so could not know whether they enjoyed real liberty or not and I do not know if there was poverty there which I did not see."

Blest said he had never visited the United States but would like to, "although I do not like the way the United States treats Negroes," he added.

Blest said that although President Ibanez could not be a friend of the common people of Chile—"how could he be our friend when he has put us in jail?"—he held no resentments. "All men are my brothers, including Communists," he said. "I already have forgiven everyone who may be responsible for my being here in prison."

"My only desire in this life is to help the workers of Chile receive enough pay so that they can live as human beings."

BOMBERS STILL OUTDO MISSILES.

For a 1500-mile ballistic missile, while an air base in Africa would not warrant expenditure of the 12 to 24 missiles required to hit it.

The prospect, according to Quarles, is that within perhaps 10 years defensive missiles may make it so difficult for the bomber to get through that the Air Force will have to turn to the less accurate and less efficient ballistic missile because it is so much more difficult to intercept.

Program Reoriented. In his effort to put ballistic missiles in proper perspective, Quarles by no means played down their importance nor the effort that is being expended on them. Two years ago, he said, the missile program was reoriented and a second contractor was put to work on the development, along different lines, of the 5000-mile intercontinental ballistic missile.

At the same time the Air Force brought two direct prime contractors into the propulsion field, the guidance field and in the nose-cone re-entry problem is to devise some means of keeping the nose of the missile and its explosive from burning up like a meteor as it re-enters the atmosphere.

Thus there are two competitive approaches being made on all the main problems of the intercontinental ballistic missile.

The Army and Navy together on one hand and the Air Force on the other are each engaged in competitive approaches to develop the 1500-mile intermediate range missile.

It is Quarles' contention that just about all that can be done to speed the development of ballistic missiles is being done. We are, he said, "pressing ahead at every turn with the highest sense of urgency and the highest priority."

Senator Charges Budget Director Used False Figures. WASHINGTON, March 2 (UP)—Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem.) Washington, today accused the director of the Budget Bureau of using false figures which mislead the American people about the extent of the ballistic missile program.

Jackson charged Percival O. Brundage, newly named head of the Budget Bureau, with trying to convey the impression that the ballistic missile program is greater than it actually is.

Jackson's attack was provoked by a speech in New York yesterday in which Brundage defended the Administration's ballistic missile program against Democratic attacks. In his prepared text, Brundage said: "The ballistic missile program has priority over anything else. It is being developed as rapidly as it can be done in this country. We have provided in the budget an amount of nearly $1,500,000,000 for research and development in the field for fiscal 1957."

Jackson said the implication in Brundage's speech that $1,500,000,000 will be spent next year to develop ballistic missiles is "false" and "Mr. Brundage, of all people, should know the correct figure."

Total for All Types. Actually, Jackson said the $1,500,000,000 is the total to be spent on all types of missiles, both for research and development. The amount being spent on ballistic missiles is smaller and classified, "as again Mr. Brundage should know," Jackson said in an interview.

A Budget Bureau spokesman conceded that Brundage's statement was "somewhat ambiguous." Jackson said Brundage "owes an apology to the American people for attempting to mislead them" about the extent of the ballistic missile program.

Jackson said in an interview, "The spokesman said, 'as again Mr. Brundage should know.' Jackson said Brundage 'owes an apology to the American people for attempting to mislead them' about the extent of the ballistic missile program."

OIL FIRM MADE MILLIONS, PAID NO INCOME TAX

aires have been contributing huge sums to their political pets, like Senator Joe McCarthy, and pouring money into political magazines, broadcasts, and other propaganda to influence public opinion.

For years Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas has carefully scrutinized the House Ways and Means Committee which writes the tax laws to make sure nobody got on that committee who might vote against the 27½ per cent oil depletion allowance and the right of oil-gas companies to write off the total cost of drilling wells.

What the oil-gas companies have been getting out of the Eisenhower Administration continues to unfold with exciting drama.

On Jan. 11, 1956, I revealed for the first time how Secretary of the Interior McKay had bowed to Maj. Gen. Frank Schwengel, president of Seagram's whisky, and granted drilling rights in the Lacassine Waterfowl Refuge of Louisiana to Seagram's Frankfort Oil Co. I also reported that, prior to this, McKay had placed a stop order against oil permits in game preserves.

This was wrong, and I apologize for underestimating McKay's generosity. During the fall of 1953, McKay issued 53 oil and gas leases to the Shell Oil Co. in the Railroad Valley Game Management Area of Nevada.

Hundreds of small wildcaters abandoned their applications during McKay's alleged "stop order." They took McKay at his word, thought no leases were processed while that order was in effect, and waited for the order to be lifted. On Aug. 31, 1953, to Dec. 2, 1955, but Shell Oil got closer to McKay's word. This was developed in testimony before the House Marine and Fisheries Committee.

"Had Right to Change Order." "After all, he (McKay) had issued the stop order, and he had the right to change the order," if he wanted to, testified Donald J. Chaney, Interior Department lawyer for Fish and Wildlife.

"Did he give any notice of lifting the stop order?" asked Chairman Herbert Bonner of North Carolina.

"No, not that I know of," replied Chaney, "no public notice."

"So that other people who wanted to get this property could come in and make the same claim?"

"Not that I know of," Chaney admitted.

Next day Representative Henry S. Reuss (Dem.) Wisconsin, pointed out that during McKay's so-called "stop order," a total of 60 oil and gas leases had been issued. Only 16 leases had previously been issued during the entire 55-year history of wildlife refuges.

"It is well said," declared Reuss, "referring to the stop order, 'that what the Secretary hath given, the Secretary can take away. And what the Secretary has done when he granted these leases was just pro tanto amending the stop order.'"

"I suggest that this really is not a very good way to run a Government department; that when we want to repeal an order we repeal it in writing, and we duly publicize the repeal so that all men may know what is going on. We do not simply violate the order."

EISENHOWER'S POPULARITY IS STILL CLIMBING

handling his White House duties.

Even among Democrats, six out of every 10 approve.

Among independents—the shift voters who swing one way or the other, depending on the issues and candidates—eight out of every 10 approve, as follows:

Rep. Dem. Ind. Approve—93% 60% 81% Disapprove—2 27 8

Figures reporting the popularity of the President should be interpreted as a vote of general confidence or approval in his handling of state affairs. Obviously, the figure does not represent the number who would actually vote for him in a presidential election, because of straight party voting.

Liberty Bell Oil Co., founded here in 1919, has been sold to the Socony Mobil Oil Co. Inc. It was announced yesterday by George Koertel, vice president and general manager of the firm.

The company, whose general offices and main plant are at 1430-40 South Vandeventer avenue, will continue to operate as Liberty Bell Oil Co. and will handle the same products and provide the same services as before the sale.

The decision of the stockholders to sell followed the recent death of Charles H. Osthoff Sr., chairman of the board and founder of the company.

FIRM AGREES NOT TO CLAIM SHOES CURE FOOT DEFECTS

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission said today a Lowell (Mass.) maker of children's shoes has agreed not to claim that they will correct or prevent defects or abnormalities in children's feet.

The agreement, the FTC said, did not constitute any admission of wrongdoing on the part of the firm, Sherman Bros. Shoe Mfg. Corp. The FTC said the stipulation does not prevent the firm from representing that the shoes embody devices "often approved by physicians as beneficial" in some instances.

AVERAGE PRICE FOR STOCKS AT A RECORD HIGH

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—The stock market advanced to a new record high level today in a strong rise led by the oil shares.

The average established a record high Sept. 23 of $181.50, just before it plunged down in a major reaction brought on by news of President Eisenhower's heart attack.

It recovered swiftly from the fall and touched the same record high of $181.50 on Dec. 5 and 6. Since then the market has been somewhat under the old peaks.

A rise of more than two weeks was climaxed today with a break through to another historic high peak for the averages.

The United Press said stocks closed the week of the Eisenhower "yes" decision on a strong note with the market at new Dow-Jones 1956 highs.

Dow-Jones industrials reached a record high. Rails were at their highest since last December. Utilities neared their 1956 high.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 2.15 points higher at 488.84 at the close, a new record high. The 20 rails gained 2.09 at 162.79 and the 15 utilities rose .51 of a point to 65.90.)

The industrial component of the average was up $1.60 at a new record high of $258.60, rails were up $1.80 at $136, and the utilities were head 30 cents at $74.20.

The oils were joined in the advance by the railroads, steels, coppers, chemicals, and many individual issues. The motors and aircrafts, however, were mixed to lower.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were numerous, and some stocks pushed up even more.

Trading amounted to 2,860,000 shares as compared with 2,410,000 shares traded yesterday.

Borg-Warner was up between 1 and 2 points as directors raised the dividend payment to 60 cents from 50 cents paid in previous quarters.

Panhandle Oil was down a small fraction after directors decided on temporary deferment of dividend consideration.

Warner Bros. was down between 1 and 2 points after starting on 5500 shares of 7% at $22. The company agreed to sell 750 features and a number of short subjects for $21,000,000 to PRM Inc.

Day's Review Of Business And Finance

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—Directors of American Gas & Electric Co. at a special meeting voted today to recommend a split of the common stock on a basis of three shares for each two now held. Following announcement of the split proposal, the company's common stock immediately rose about $5 a share on the New York Stock Exchange. The proposal will go to the shareholders for approval at the annual meeting April 25. It also is subject to approval of the Securities & Exchange Commission. To implement the split, the board also proposed an increase in par value of the stock from $5 to $10, and voted to recommend an increase in authorized shares from 20,082,162 to a total of 25,000,000.

Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) reported net income in 1955 set a new record for 1955. It was $4.81 a share. In 1954 the company had a net income of $117,156,768, equal to $3.23 a share. Sales for 1955 totaled $1,781,317,827 compared with $1,660,343,193 in 1954.

GRAINS, SOYBEANS HIGHER AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, March 2 (AP)—Grains worked their way higher as the recent fall trading pace slackened on the Board of Trade today.

Buying entered soybeans on news of a heavy January crush of beans and renewed strength in soybean oil. Cash bean oil set a new high since 1954 at 14 1/4 cents a pound.

Lack of deliveries of cash grain on March contracts proved a firming factor in rye and old crop wheat. New crop wheat rebounded from recent ease on the prospect of little, if any, moisture in the winter wheat belt over the next five days.

Corn moved higher with the rest of the market as the cash grain met a good demand. Oats, however, were not able to make any headway.

Near the close, wheat was 1 1/4 @ 1 1/2c higher, corn 1/2 @ 1 1/4c higher, oats 1/2 @ 1 1/4c higher, soybeans 2 @ 1 1/2c higher, rye 1/2 @ 1 1/4c higher, and old crop wheat 1/2 @ 1 1/4c higher.

By Sam Dawson

BUSINESS rather expects to be one of the many issues in the presidential campaign. The enthusiasm voiced by many top industrialists and financiers over President Eisenhower's decision to run again sounded mostly one note: It would bolster business confidence.

Sam Dawson

Both points of view will be exaggerated in the political campaign. But no matter how intertemperate the claims or the charges may become, "business" and its place in the nation's well being seem almost sure to become one of the issues.

BUSINESS HAS BEEN INCREASINGLY SENSITIVE about its position and about public opinion in the last 20 years or so. Particularly since World War II, business leaders have tried hard to "get the business story across"—to make the rank and file of the citizenry understand that healthy business meant a generally healthy nation, that business wasn't a wholly selfish thing but had the general welfare at heart, too. New terms for capitalism were coined: "private enterprise" or the "incentive system." Speakers from the world of business have stressed the virtues and advantages of the system from one end of the land to the other.

AND MANY BUSINESS LEADERS FEEL THAT THEY have made considerable progress in laying the old bogies about robber barons and about financiers whose motto was "the public be damned." Business leaders realize that the present business setup was put for a test when several top leaders of business moved into leading posts in Washington three years ago and announced that the climate for business would be favorable. Industrialists are quick to give to this a good deal of the credit for the good times that blossomed last year—doubters think that many other factors had equal or greater weight in turning the recession into a boom.

INDUSTRIALISTS WHO BELIEVE THAT THE prosperous times show what business can do when given a freer hand fret lest something jolt confidence, turn the economy downward and sour the electorate. Most of them realize all the other factors making for upward or downward turns of the business cycle. Most know that other issues will be hotly debated during the political campaign and may capture more of the public's interest. But many expect that as the campaign progresses there will be debates on which is better for the nation, an attitude of "be kind to business" or one of "police business closely lest it grab too big a share."

BUSINESSMEN, WITH FEW EXCEPTIONS, BELIEVE that their postwar record has been good, that their present activities are more helpful than not, that their plans for future growth of industry and trade are the nation's best bet for good times in the years ahead. But they also know that not everyone agrees with them. And in this campaign, perhaps more than in most, they expect to be under scrutiny.

GRANITE CITY STEEL CO. BUILDING NEW FURNACE

A new blast furnace is being built at Granite City Steel Co., Granite City, to replace one of the plant's two furnaces which has been in almost continuous operation since 1920, it was announced today.

The shell of the new furnace, to be 171 feet high and weigh 605 tons, is being erected on a platform 50 feet from the old furnace. When it is dismantled, the new one will be moved on steel rollers to the old furnace's foundation.

prison two months. Chile is in the process of implementing the plan to halt inflation devised by the United States management consultant firm of Klein & Saks. Blest has spent the last two months in contemplation, and prayer and in daily lectures on the virtues of the Christian life. These lectures have been delivered to youthful delinquents among his fellow prisoners especially, but by now they are attended by hardened criminals and by the prison guards—and on visiting day by union members from outside the prison as well.

Gift From Mother.

The Archbishop of Chile is 89 years old and too ill now to visit Blest in prison but he regularly sends his secretary and other priests to visit the labor leader. Blest's mother also is too old to go to prison every week—she is 81. The most important moment during the visiting hour at the prison yesterday, however, was when a union member delivered to Blest a small brown paper sack from his mother containing six eggs.

Blest, who is 51 years old but appears much older, has never married. He has devoted his entire life to the Chilean labor movement and is known among his followers as the "Red Christ."

"I have learned much in prison," Blest said. "It has been a great experience. The chief thing I have learned is the advantage of faith. Materialism cannot stand up against faith."

"I have been reading both the Bible and the teachings of the Gandhi. From both I have learned all over again the superiority of spiritual strength over material force."

As he spoke Blest's blue eyes shone. He is a small, fagged, unkempt man with broken teeth and an unshaven face. Only his eyes reveal something of the power he holds over the masses of Chilean people.

"From Christ and Gandhi I have learned that violence never is good," Blest said. "And while reading and praying here I have cleansed my conscience. I fight only for justice—and I fight without violence."

Denies Being Red.

Blest said he was entirely outside the politics of Chile. He denied vehemently that he was a Communist.

"How can I be a Communist? I am a Catholic. It may be that I agree with some of the ideas of Communism. The early Christians were in a sense Communist. If everyone would follow the teachings of Christ I am sure there would be no capitalism.

"The important thing is what takes place inside a man. The transformation of mankind cannot be imposed from the outside."

Asked about his trip to Russia in 1953, Blest said: "It was very interesting. The people seemed happy and to be enjoying a good standard of living—but of course I only saw what they showed me. Didn't even speak the language so could not know whether they enjoyed real liberty or not and I do not know if there was poverty there which I did not see."

Blest said he had never visited the United States but would like to, "although I do not like the way the United States treats Negroes," he added.

Blest said that although President Ibanez could not be a friend of the common people of Chile—"how could he be our friend when he has put us in jail?"—he held no resentments.

"All men are my brothers, including Communists," he said. "I already have forgiven everyone who may be responsible for my being here in prison."

"I only desire in this life is to help the workers of Chile receive enough pay so that they can live as human beings."

for a 1500-mile ballistic missile, while an air base in Africa would not warrant expenditure of the 12 to 24 missiles required to hit it.

The prospect, according to Quarles, is that within perhaps 10 years defensive missiles may make it so difficult for the bomber to get through that the Air Force will have to turn to the less accurate and less efficient ballistic missile because it is so much more difficult to intercept.

Program Reoriented.

In his effort to put ballistic missiles in proper perspective, Quarles by no means played down their importance nor the effort that is being expended on them. Two years ago, he said, the missile program was reoriented and a second contractor was put to work on the development, along different lines, of the 5000-mile intercontinental ballistic missile.

At the same time the Air Force brought two direct prime contractors into the propulsion field, the guidance field and in the nose-cone re-entry field. The nose-cone re-entry problem is to devise some means of keeping the nose of the missile and its explosive from burning up like a meteor as it re-enters the atmosphere.

Thus there are two competitive approaches being made on all the main problems of the intercontinental ballistic missile.

The Army and Navy together on one hand and the Air Force on the other are each engaged in competitive approaches to develop the 1500-mile intermediate range missile.

It is Quarles' contention that just about all that can be done to speed the development of ballistic missiles is being done. We are, he said, "pressing ahead at every turn with the highest sense of urgency and the highest priority."

Senator Charges Budget Director Used False Figures

WASHINGTON, March 2 (UPI)—Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem., Wash.), today accused the director of the Budget Bureau of using false figures which misled the American people about the extent of the ballistic missile program.

Jackson charged Percival O. Brundage, newly named head of the Budget Bureau, with trying to convey the impression that the ballistic missile program is greater than it actually is.

Jackson's attack was provoked by a speech in New York yesterday in which Brundage defended the Administration's ballistic missile program against Democratic attacks. In his prepared text, Brundage said: "The priority of anything else is being developed as rapidly as it can be done in this country. We have provided the budget an amount of nearly $1,500,000,000 for research and development in the field of ballistic missiles."

Jackson said the implication in Brundage's speech that $1,500,000,000 will be spent next year to develop ballistic missiles is "false" and "Mr. Brundage's correct figure."

Actually, Jackson said the $1,500,000,000 is the total spent on all types of missiles—both for research and procurement. The amount being spent on ballistic missiles is smaller and classified, "as again Mr. Brundage should know," Jackson said in an interview.

Jackson said Brundage "owes an apology to the American people for attempting to mislead them about the extent of the ballistic missile program."

A Budget Bureau spokesman conceded that Brundage's statement was "somewhat ambiguous," the spokesman said, is that the $1,500,000,000 is the total to be spent in the next fiscal year on research and development and procurement of all types of missiles.

The breakdown furnished by the Budget Bureau spokesman was $224,000,000 for research and development of all types of guided missiles and $1,276,000,000 for procurement.

Jackson, a member of the Armed Services and Atomic Energy committees, has been a persistent critic of the Administration's ballistic missile program, claiming that more emphasis should be placed on developing the futuristic weapons.

Next day Representative Henry S. Reuss (Dem., Wis.), pointed out that during McKay's so-called "stop order," a total of 60 oil and gas leases had been previously issued during the entire 55-year history of wildlife refuges.

Reuss, referring to the stop order, "that what the Secretary had given was just pro tanto amending the stop order."

"I suggest that this really is not a very good way to run a Government department; that when we repeal an order we duly publicize the repeal so that all men may know what is going on. We do not simply violate the order."

LIBERTY BELL OIL CO. SOLD TO SOCONY MOBIL

Liberty Bell Oil Co., founded here in 1919, has been sold to the Socony Mobil Oil Co. Inc. It was announced yesterday by George Koertel, vice president and general manager of the firm.

The company, whose general offices and main plant are at 1430-40 South Vandeventer avenue, will continue to operate as Liberty Bell Oil Co. and will handle the same products and provide the same services as before the sale.

The decision of the stockholders to sell followed the recent death of Charles H. Schoff Jr., chairman of the board and founder of the company.

FIRM AGREES NOT TO CLAIM SHOES CURE FOOT DEFECTS

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission said today a Lowell (Mass.) maker of children's shoes has agreed not to claim that they will correct or prevent defects or abnormalities in children's feet.

The agreement, the FTC said, did not constitute any admission of wrongdoing on the part of the firm, Sherman Bros. Shoe Mfg. Corp. The FTC said the stipulation does not prevent the firm from representing that the shoes embody devices "often approved by physicians as beneficial" in some instances.

aires have been contributing huge sums to their political pets, like Senator Joe McCarthy, and pouring money into political magazines, broadcasts, and other propaganda to influence public opinion.

For years Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas has carefully scrutinized the House Ways and Means Committee which writes the tax laws to make sure nobody got on that committee who might vote against the 27 1/2 per cent oil depletion allowance and the right of oil-gas companies to write off the total cost of drilling wells.

What the oil-gas companies have been getting out of the Eisenhower Administration continues to unfold with exciting drama.

On Jan. 11, 1956, I revealed for the first time how Secretary of the Interior McKay had bowed to Maj. Gen. Frank Schwengel, president of Seagraves' whisky, and drilling rights in the Lacassine Waterfowl Refuge of Louisiana to Seagraves' Frankfort Oil Co. I also reported that, prior to this, McKay had placed a stop order against oil permits in game preserves.

This was wrong, and I apologize for underestimating McKay's generosity. During the fall of 1953, McKay issued 53 oil and gas leases to the Shell Oil Co. in the Railroad Valley Game Management Area of Nevada.

Hundreds of small wildcatters abandoned their applications during McKay's alleged "stop order." They took McKay at his word, thought no leases were processed while that order was in effect, and waited.

But Shell Oil got closer to McKay than the others and developed 53 leases. This was developed in testimony before the House Marine and Fisheries Committee.

"Had Right to Change Order." "After all, he (McKay) had issued the stop order, but he had the right to change the stop order if he wanted to," declared Donald J. Chaney, Interior Department lawyer for Fish and Wildlife.

"Did he give any notice of lifting the stop order?" asked Chairman Herbert Bonner of North Carolina.

"No, not that I know of," replied Chaney, "no public notice."

"So that other people who wanted to get this property could come in and make the same claim?"

"Not that I know of," Chaney admitted.

Next day Representative Henry S. Reuss (Dem., Wis.), pointed out that during McKay's so-called "stop order," a total of 60 oil and gas leases had been previously issued during the entire 55-year history of wildlife refuges.

POPULAR FRONT OF REDS OPPOSED BY LABORITES

LONDON, March 2 (AP)—The British Labor party will resist any Soviet attempt to enlist Socialists in a popular front with the Communists, a party leader said last night. The stand of British Laborites, who regard themselves as Socialists, was made plain on the eve of a conference in Zurich of West European Socialist leaders. The leaders plan to chart their future strategy in the light of new Soviet policies enunciated in Moscow last week. The British Labor party informant, who has held high government office, declined use of his name. He told a reporter: "The Russian Communist Party Congress showed that the Soviets may be planning to revive the popular front movement of the 1930s in Europe and Asia. The British Labor party will resist any such moves, wherever they may develop." Two British Labor delegates have flown to Zurich with orders to spurn suggestions of Socialist-Communist collaboration when that problem comes up.

West Berlin Complaint to U.N. BERLIN, March 2 (AP)—West Berlin announced yesterday that it will inform the United Nations that Communist East Germany has sentenced 30 persons for encouraging its citizens to flee to West Germany. The complaint will be sent to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

An Interesting Look At St. Croix Island

By Leonard Hall

ST. THOMAS, V.I. THE islands of the West Indies are green jewels set in the turquoise waters of the Caribbean. You come to each of them and leave convinced that it is the most beautiful of all; then arrive at the next and must readjust your ideas of beauty. Each island has its problems which may be those of population or economics or agriculture, yet everywhere there is intelligent effort being made to solve these. And with it all, the people are the kindest and most hospitable that could possibly be imagined. Already we are beginning to think in island terms and island time which has a very pleasant way of disregarding clocks. In island language, those of us who come from the mainland United States are "continentals," people who are from the other side of the Atlantic are always Europeans, while everyone born here or adopted through long residence is a "native"—and this regardless of ethnic origin.

WE CAME into San Juan on a Sunday afternoon after being four hours late in leaving Miami, to find that our plane for St. Croix had already made its departure. But the airline passenger agent had found accommodations for us in this tremendously crowded city at one of the older hotels, the Kasabanka. Any shortcoming in choice of room was more than made up for by the excellent cuisine provided by Paul, the proprietor. And we were up early next morning for the short half-hour over-water flight to Christiansted, the principal city of St. Croix in the Virgin Islands. Incidentally, the airport at San Juan is one of the newest and most modern we've seen anywhere, with the big ships of Eastern, Pan American and other lines arriving and departing and the smaller DC-3s of Caribbean running a regular shuttle service between the islands and the cities of Puerto Rico.

AT THE ST. CROIX AIRPORT we were met by Morris Henderson, who is Agricultural Extension Agent for the island, and George Seaman, who is conducting a project here for the United States Fish and Wildlife Service. Both are native-born and at once we began drinking in the history of the island. St. Croix is tiny, although not quite as small as nearby St. Thomas, and contains about 85 square miles. Its ethnic history is interesting and complex. In very early times the Arakaw Indians, who were peaceful and developed an advanced culture, were driven away by the more warlike Caribs who raided throughout all these islands in their great seagoing canoes. The first European settlers came here in the early 1600s and the island has lived at various times under the flags of the Danes, the Dutch, the French, the Knights of Malta, the British and finally—and we are sure the inhabitants hope permanently—the American.

THE EARLY ECONOMY of the island was agricultural, with large sugar estates built by the settlers and worked by slaves. Each plantation had its sugar mill with tall stone towers, many of which still stand, even though the rest of the buildings have fallen into ruins. Today the principal agriculture is sugar cane which is refined locally and distilled into rum to provide St. Croix its chief revenue. Over-population is not a problem here as in so many West Indian islands, although sugar-growing brings its own troubles as always happens with a one-crop agriculture. Thus neither large nor small land owners are interested in growing crops for home consumption and the cost of vegetables, fruit and meat is high since they must be imported. This leaves the poorer town people and small farmers with a very limited diet. St. Croix does, however, support a growing beef cattle industry and a good strain of all-purpose cattle has developed from crossing native stock with Brahman stock and British Red Polls.

COMING FROM the airport we stopped at the United States Agricultural Experiment Station to meet the director, Dr. Bond, and other members of the staff. Next we went directly to the beautifully furnished home of our hosts, Mrs. Larsen, in the quaint town of Christiansted. This was a pleasant thick-walled building just across the narrow main street from Government House which dates to the 1700s and is a fine example of the colonial architecture of the period. Next door, now housing a shop and an excellent restaurant, was the building where Alexander Hamilton once clerked. Once we'd "settled in" here, we started out again with Henderson, our guide, for a tour of the island such as is experienced by few visitors.

DURING THE NEXT six or seven hours we covered most of the passable roads. We touched at several attractive resort hotels and guest houses. Since these can accommodate no more than about 200 persons, the island is hardly over-run by tourists who are always a mixed blessing. They bring in needed revenue, but dilute the charm of these delightful old towns. We watched the cane being harvested, stopped at the sugar factory, saw old estates with such quaint names as Katherine's Hope, Anna's Rest and The Two Williams. Constantly as we drove the winding roads through the hills, we caught glimpses of the blue Caribbean. We drove through a jungle road, crossed the highest mountain, waved to Henderson's 4-H Club youngsters and stopped the car to question our guide about exotic flowers—the scarlet African tulip tree, hibiscus, bougainvillea and countless others. And we added a half-dozen new birds to our list including the ant and Black Witch.

THERE IS FINE SWIMMING at Christiansted and the sleepy little Frederiksted on the north coast. There is sailing, game and spear fishing and horseback riding. Best is a year-around temperature of 78 that varies only a few degrees from day to night and season to season. Our time was too short for these activities so we concentrated on photography. Moreover, we were delighted to show our Audubon film to an audience of "island Americans" interested in preserving and restoring the resources which are the strength of our democracy. Most interesting of all was the new friends we made and the discovery of a beauty spot to which we are already planning to return. Herein lies the great compensation of a trip such as ours where we can never stay long enough anywhere. At least we see many places and can choose the ones which are worth another visit and a longer stay.

Try and Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

THOMAS A. EDISON was asked the secret of his success. "Two things that had nothing to do with it," he replied candidly. "One was good luck. The other was that nobody ever was able to convince me that it was unfair to my fellow workers to put forth my best efforts in my work. I'm glad there was no such thing as the eight-hour day when I was a young man. I won't say it isn't a boon to others—but this country wouldn't be where it is today if the young men of 50 years ago had been afraid they might earn more than they were paid for!"

"SO YOU WANT TO MARRY my little girl," said a father to a young suitor. "You look OK, but the question is: Can you support a family? Don't answer hastily, my boy. There are nine of us, you know."

Buchwald Visits St. Louis Schools

Columnist Learns Only Thing Our Teen-Agers Throw at Him Are Questions

By Art Buchwald

Following is columnist Art Buchwald's report of his visit with St. Louis teen-agers. This column will appear in 30 newspapers in the United States, in addition to the Post-Dispatch, as well as in papers in several other countries.

OUR only contact with American teen-agers in the past eight years has been through the M-G-M film "Blackboard Jungle." According to the film American teen-agers were running riot over adults and a man who tried to teach them found himself taking his life in his hands.

When we decided to visit two St. Louis high schools to talk to some Missouri teen-agers, our wife, who also saw "Blackboard Jungle," warned us, "Whatever you do don't turn your back on them."

To be safe we wore a bullet-proof jacket, borrowed a .45 revolver and strapped a bayonet to our pant leg. No teen-agers were going to get the best of us.

The first school we went to was the Southwest High School, located surprisingly enough in the southwest part of St. Louis. The principal, Mr. Young, met us and took us to a room where the journalism classes were held. There were about 80 students in the room.

We looked at them and they looked at us. We waited for one of them to call us "Daddio." If they did we were going to shoot them with our .45. According to "Blackboard Jungle" you have to be tough or the kids will walk all over you.

We kept our back to the blackboard as our wife warned us to do. "If I hear any questions," we told them. "But I'll plug the first student who makes a false move."

A pretty young girl in the first row asked us, "Do they have television in France?"

Another student wanted to know, "Who pays your expenses when you wander around Europe?"

We wondered if they were kidding us or if they were really serious.

The questions flew at us. "Do your policies and the paper's policies have to coincide? Do you have to know a foreign language to be a foreign correspondent?" What does the average Frenchman think of the average American? Are the French as bad drivers as everyone says? Do the French women really wear those styles we see in the fashion magazines? Every paper in the country seems to be Republican or Democrat. How does that come about—do they have a meeting or something and decide who is going to be what?"

ART BUCHWALD AND PUPILS AT SOUTHWEST HIGH SCHOOL. HE HAD TO ADMIT TEEN-AGERS ARE PRETTY NICE PEOPLE.

NOBODY in the class threw anything at anybody else. Nobody shouted out of turn and everyone listened attentively. Could the "Blackboard Jungle" have been wrong? We relaxed our hand on the pistol. But we still didn't turn our back on them.

Forty minutes and 60 questions later the bell rang and the students came up to us to ask us more questions. "How do we seem as teen-agers?" someone asked.

We had to admit they were pretty nice people.

After Southwest High School we went over to Beaumont High School to address a class in American Problems. Perhaps, we thought to ourselves, Southwest High was special and didn't necessarily represent the American teen-ager. Maybe at Beaumont we'd get a chance to use our bayonet.

This time we talked to 150 students. They wanted to know about the Saar problem in relation to France; if all the money we were spending in France was doing us any good; and whether the European nations could start a war without us.

We tried to get them to talk about dope and hot rods and gang killings, but they would have none of it. They wanted to know how European kids date, and what kind of music they danced to and what kind of refreshments they drank. They asked if France believed in the United Nations, and how many languages students spoke in Europe.

After class, as we left the high school a small group of students in blue jeans and sports shirts were waiting for us. Okay, we thought, so this is the way they wanted it. They were waiting until I got off the school grounds. I gripped the pistol in one hand and the bayonet with the other. I faced them and snarled. "Come and get me if you want to."

THE largest of the boys stepped forward. The others followed. Suddenly I found myself surrounded. There was no blackboard to protect me. The leader of the group said, "Sir, we'd like to ask you a question."

We looked him coldly in the eye.

"Sir, if we wanted to study in Europe, what universities would you recommend?"

We dropped the gun and bayonet. There was no use fighting them. But we can't really be blamed for our behavior. If American teen-agers don't behave as they did in "Blackboard Jungle," it certainly wasn't our fault.

Angel Food Cake. Good dessert: Bake an angel food cake, using a packaged mix. Slice and serve with a standard lemon pudding sauce and dollops of whipped cream. Membrane-free sections of orange, added to the lemon sauce, will make the dessert extra good.

Striped Fabrics.

Striped fabrics are significant in play clothes for children. The hooded pullover made of cotton knit is typical. Sailcloth in striped patterns is used for blouses, shorts, and pedal pushers. Coats of plain colored fabrics are lined with gaily striped cottons. Striped denim is another material used extensively.

Answer to Question 1.

YEARS ago, Ralph Smedley founded the Toastmaster's Club for three reasons. First, public speaking gives you a sense of self-importance; second, a feeling of achievement; third, a new self-confidence. This nonprofit club has now spread all over the world, and given hundreds of thousands of people great improvements in personality. Each member speaks two to five minutes several times each weekly session.

Answer to Question 2.

Anthropologist W. M. Krogan told newsmen that man's ideal today is the "glamazon"—a tall, statuesque girl with a lot of beauty and a smattering of brains. He said, though, that men had nothing against short, blonde, and stupid girls. From this press dispatch I gather the prof thinks beautiful women of any kind tend to be dumb. In a study of the intelligence of I found that good looking and beautiful women have a slight—very slight—edge over their less favored sisters.

Answer to Question 3.

No, they should try to forget them. Some wives manage this every six months, others require 18. My wife takes nine months. So, I string my seven good

Secrets of Charm

For a 'Wingless' Back

EXERCISE can't correct sharply protruding shoulder blades—not if you persist in carrying your shoulders incorrectly. If the back you turn to your public is to be beautiful, smooth and wingless, be on guard against hunching when you sit, stand and walk.

The shoulder blades are two almost flat bones which attach to the shoulder joints and spine by strong muscles. These muscles stretch and stay stretched if you habitually strain your shoulders forward. They come so weak they cannot hold your shoulder blades flat, as Nature intended. The blades turn sharp edges outward—thinness can't be blamed for bony back contours when there's this unnecessary loss of muscle fitness.

Military rigidity isn't the answer, even at the beginning of a corrective program. The shoulders must be carried in a relaxed fashion, dropped to normal level and in place for perfect body alignment.

Once you know how to set your shoulders, the most important thing is to keep them that way at all times. The position will be easier to hold, however, if for a while you make this exercise daily routine. Sit with your hips flat against a wall. Place your arms against the wall so your elbows are close to your waist and the backs of your hands are flat against the wall opposite your shoulders.

NO ONE CAN BE BEAUTIFUL WITH WING-LIKE SHOULDER BLADES.

Now slide your arms up as far as they will reach, elbows and hands still touching the wall. Pull and stretch 10 times a day at first and increase to 30 times.

Ten Secrets of Charm.

You are welcome, free of charge, to the reminder card. Ten Secrets of Charm. It lists ten points to remember as milestones along the road to greater charm. Write to Secrets of Charm in care of the Post-Dispatch, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

Fix It Yourself

Flush Tank Talks. TO MOST people, the inner workings of the average flush tank remain something of a mechanical mystery. Even people with a high mechanical ability become frustrated when something happens.

Several different things can go wrong with a flush tank and one of them is when the water insists on coming into the tank even after the tank is filled. This is caused in most cases by a wrong inlet valve washer and you'll find the following symptoms: The tank will be full of water but water will continue to flow into the tank. The excess water will flow down the overflow pipe in the tank and into the bowl. This means you'll have a small flow of water through the bowl.

What you do in a case like this is first turn off the supply of water to the tank by means of the nearest shut-off valve. After you've done this, flush the tank to drain the water out. Now you have to find the inlet valve and this is easy. It's the little assembly that is connected to the big ball float that floats on the water. The connection consists of a long brass rod. The inlet valve plunger can be removed by unscrewing one or more thumb screws on the inlet valve assembly, and once these are out of the way, the plunger with the washer on the end will pull out and you'll be

The Late Stayers

By Amy Vanderbilt

HOW in the world do you get people to go home when the end of the party has obviously come? Most hard-working people don't entertain week nights if they must get to work early in the morning. There are people, however, who literally seem to need no sleep whatsoever, and others who must have a full eight or nine hours a night to function well the next day. It is certainly unfair for those who can get along on four or five hours of sleep to expect their friends to sit up and entertain them, no matter how nice the party.

A device I find works when a weary husband is giving his wife high signs is this: The wife says to the late stayers, "I know you'll excuse Joe. He has to be up very early." She can, if she wants, depending upon circumstances, say, "But you and I needn't be bothered by that." Unless the guests are very thick-skinned, they'll take the hint and leave shortly after anyhow.

IF, DESPITE THESE TACTFUL MOVES, the guests should settle deeper and deeper into their chairs I feel that the hostess today is justified in saying, "I'm sorry, I didn't realize it was so late," and be quite obvious in failing to serve any further refreshments.

She may even stand and, with close friends, begin gathering up the glasses and ash trays. If they offer to stay and help her and she knows this may even further prolong their visit after cleaning up is completed, she should say, "Oh, no, I am not going to bother very much and I know you want to get home. It is very late."

OF COURSE, if the hostess is a business woman and must be on the job the next morning, she can be much more abrupt than this. She can say, when the time comes and they show no sign of leaving, "Joe and I are so sorry but we have to work tomorrow. We hate to bring this lovely party to an end but you understand, I know."

What do you do if you have house guests who want to stay up when you obviously want to go to bed? You go to bed at the time you choose, excusing yourself, of course, to them and see to it that they are comfortable, know where their quarters are, know where they can find a late snack if they want it. You instruct them in anything they need to know, such as switching off lights, locking doors, putting out (or letting in) the cat, etc. Leave on hallway and bathroom lights for such guests and there your obligation ends.

Making Waffles

By Christopher Billopp

WAFFLES are universally popular. They can be cooked at the table so that the cook is not cut off from the rest of the company. Therefore, a delightful meal can be made of them.

That is, if a question is not raised as to when the waffle iron is hot enough to put the batter in, and one faction contends that it is and the other that it isn't.

That is, if after the batter is put in one faction does not contend that the waffle is done and the other that it should cook longer.

That is, if the faction which contends that the waffle is done does not win out and raise the top of the iron and the upper half of the waffle along with it, so that the other faction exclaims triumphantly, "Now, just look what you have done."

That is, if the faction which did the damage does not have to set to work with a fork digging the pieces of the waffle out until the iron is clean and fresh batter can be put in.

That is, if the pieces of the waffle are not offered to everybody at table, and insistence made that they be eaten, on the ground that the pieces taste just as good as though they were a whole waffle.

That is, if, while the pieces are being offered, the next waffle is not found sticking to the top and does not have to be dug out.

That is, if the faction which made the batter is not blamed for making it wrong, and the faction cooking the waffles is not blamed for taking them out at the wrong time, and feelings are hurt on both sides.

That is, if, when these initial problems are solved, and the waffles begin coming out in quantity, beautifully cooked, the people at the table do not reply that they are sorry but they have eaten so many fragments they are full now.

Case of the 'Mother Hen' Embezzler

Miss Minnie Mangum Lavished Funds on Others, Amount She Took Estimated at $2,900,000

By Jack Lotto

NORFOLK, Va., March 2 (INS). CEMENT mother hen hovers protectively over five little chicks on the lawn in front of Miss Minnie Mangum's modest Portsmouth home.

The symbol of her true-to-life "mother" role, Federal investigators said today, is the most likely explanation why the successful spinster business woman allegedly became the greatest embezzler in United States history.

The plump middle-aged woman, known as "Miss Minnie," has signed a confession that she systematically looted the Commonwealth Building and Loan Association of Norfolk over a 28-year period.

Now two dozen bank examiners summoned from seven states are literally swimming in a sea of checks in an attempt to determine the exact amount of her fantastic defalcation.

The latest official estimate of missing funds is $2,900,000. And the audit which has been under way since Dec. 16 won't be finished until late next month.

Meanwhile, Miss Minnie has been accused of a nominal grand larceny of $100,000 and is free in $25,000 bail until an April grand jury hears the evidence.

Officials with access to the checks said the spinster took the astronomical sums to show her relatives and friends with homes, cars, money and expensive gifts.

But the one-time assistant secretary-treasurer of Commonwealth gave 5-cent restaurant tips and ate 75-cent luncheon specials. She lived quietly in a $10,000 home on the edge of a dump.

She was very neat, favored small velvet hats and dark gray and blue dresses with cloth coats.

While she lavished expensive new cars on her relatives, Miss Minnie usually drove a three- or four-year-old model. Just before she was arrested on Dec. 29 she traded in her 1952 DeSoto for a new Pontiac.

HER blind sister, Maud, a talented pianist, for a time gave music lessons until her sister insisted her earnings could take care of them comfortably.

Miss Minnie refused to hire job applicants who smoked or wore heavy makeup. One "vice," according to those in daily contact with her, was "bright red nail polish."

From the age of 13, Miss Minnie, the eldest of six children, hovered protectively over her brothers and sisters.

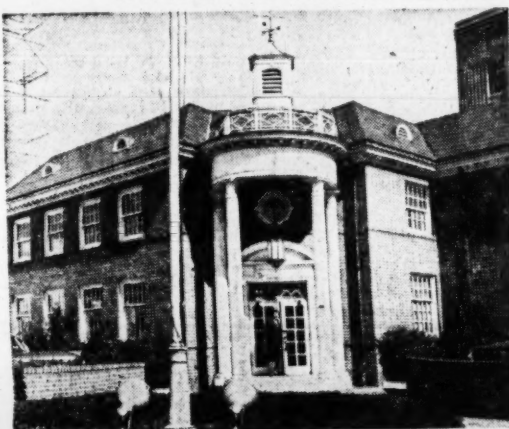

The same pattern of motherly fidget and fuss also governed her business activity.

She shouldered the burdens of responsibility when her father, William, a carpenter, died. She dedicated her life to the welfare of her invalid mother, her blind sister, and the others. She uncompromisingly gave up her hopes for love and marriage.

"She was a bear for work," said Roy F. Phillips, president of the company for which Minnie worked since its founding.

Another official of the bank described her this way:

MISS MINNIE MANGUM . . . SHE TOLD THE PASTOR, "I JUST NEVER HAD TIME FOR COURTSHIP AND A FAMILY. I HAD TO LOOK AFTER THOSE AROUND ME."

THE COMMONWEALTH BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION IN NORFOLK, VA., FROM WHICH MISS MANGUM HAS CONFESSED EMBEZZLING FUNDS.

"The way she watched over everything and everybody she was just like an old mother hen."

Dr. R. Clayton Pitts is pastor of the Port Norfolk Baptist Church where Miss Minnie worshipped for more than 30 years and once played an active leadership role in children's Sunday school classes. He recalled how after burial services for Minnie's mother last year the spinster began reminiscing wistfully about how other girls fell in love, married and had families.

Speaking of her rejection of suitors, she told him:

"I just never had time for courtship and a family. I had to look after those around me."

One example of how well she allegedly accomplished her mission in life was listed in Federal court on Feb. 16. There, attorneys for the Government, which insures bank deposits, sued Minnie and a sister-in-law, Adele D. Mangum, 36, for $176,549.58.

Minnie's total average income for the last 10 years was $80,000 she lavished over twice that amount on her brother, Jesse, 41, who died last year, and his family.

(Subsequent suits, the Associated Press reported, brought the total which the Government is seeking to recover to $433,550.02. One suit charges that Carlton L. Mangum, a nephew of Miss Minnie, and his family received $129,809.54 from Commonwealth funds over a 22-year period. Another suit was for $127,190.90 against Miss Minnie's close friend, Mrs. Corretta Mason, Lynchburg (Va.) evangelist.)

William L. Parker, attorney for the Federal Savings and Loan Association Corp., said:

"At this point in the audit, which will not be completed for nearly two months, $2,900,000 is missing. We believe this is pretty close to the maximum."

The attorney said that in her alleged written confession to the bank, actually a mutual loan society, Minnie admitted beginning to take small amounts "almost immediately" after she joined Commonwealth.

The spinster "just about lived" at the red-stoned, Williamsburg-styled two-story bank building. She arrived early at her desk under a large portrait of George Washington and remained late. She rarely took vacations and seldom was out sick.

Minnie, whom a newspaper interviewer two years ago described as "the spiritual influence" of the business, opened accounts and interviewed loan applicants. She audited the books at the main office and four branches. She checked the money at the end of each day.

"She even offered to help us go over the books," one of the investigators said, "but we wouldn't hear of it. She hovered about us, trying to be helpful and finally went home."

On Monday Morning, Miss Minnie failed to report for work. She phoned in that she was sick—the first time in years. Wednesday night the auditors phoned her and asked her to come down.

Thursday, pale and nervous, she appeared. Late that day, Phillips announced she had signed a confession.

"We trusted her completely, had complete faith in her," he said.

Miss Minnie faces a preliminary hearing in police court next Monday. This is expected to be held over pending the conclusion of the Federal audit.

Commonwealth Attorney Linwood B. Tabb Jr., said he expects to ask the April grand jury to indict Miss Mangum for embezzlement of over $2,000,000, pending final audit reports.

She faces a maximum of 10 years if convicted.

At Christmas time Miss Minnie liked to give toys and dolls to the neighborhood children. The former pastor of the Baptist church, Dr. H. L. Arthur, now at Richmond, Va., said his family always received a basket of fruit from Minnie at Christmas.

He remembered that back in the '40s when Miss Minnie was head of the girl's auxiliary center she chartered busses to take 100 or more youngsters to Norfolk's amusement center and paid all expenses.

Dr. Pitts, who succeeded the Rev. Mr. Arthur in 1950, took great pains to deny that Miss Minnie was responsible for the building of the church's fine new structure.

SHE did contribute $8800 over a period of 12 years, the pastor said, but "others donated more generously than she." Minnie gave the sums in small amounts with the exception of one $2000 contribution in 1955.

An examiner, one of two dozen agents who descended on the bank 30 seconds before closing time Dec. 16, said "the major portion of the money she distributed can be traced. . . How much can be recovered is another story."

After allegedly admitting her thefts, Miss Minnie turned over to the bank $200,000 in stocks and bonds, $30,000 in bank deposits, and needs to eight houses and three lots valued at $65,000.

When the examiners walked in and asked for all the books, an eyewitness said, Minnie was "rather composed and not unduly nervous."

Contract Bridge

By Josephine Culbertson

OFFHAND, it seems that there is no defense against the three-spade contract in the following deal, but that is not quite true. Perfect co-operation on the parts of East and West can defeat the contract, irrespective of the declarer's best efforts.

South dealer. Both sides vulnerable. North-South 30 on score.

The bidding: South West North East 1♠ Pass 2♠ Pass 3♠ Pass Pass Pass

If North-South had not been 30 on score they doubtless would have reached four spades, but as it was, the three-spade contract seemed super-safe.

West opened the heart queen. East played the five, and South conceded the trick. No shift was attractive, so West led another heart. South then drew trumps and passed the diamond 10.

East won and shifted to the club 10, but South simply covered with the jack, and the best West could do was to collect two club tricks.

If East had been alert, the outcome might have been different. The key play was to overtake the heart queen with the king at the first trick. Observe how this would embarrass the declarer. Now, if he held up the ace, East would shift to the club 10, and the best South could do would be to cover. West would win with the queen or ace, as the case demanded, and simply exit in spades, hearts or diamonds.

When East got in again, with the diamond king, a second club return through the closed hand would give the defenders the setting trick.

Against this defense it would do South no good, either, to win the first trick. East would get in once with the diamond king for a club return, and then it would be relatively easy for West to lead a low heart, playing East for the 10 spot, so that a second club could be led through declarer.

Variety of Vacations For St. Louis Family

MISS CAROLYN BORDERS... TO MOTOR IN EUROPE.

EXTENSIVE and varied travel is in store this spring for Mrs. William A. Borders and her two daughters, Miss Carolyn and Miss Kate Borders. Mrs. Borders will depart Tuesday for New York, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. C. Cabanne Smith of Houston, Tex., who will arrive here Sunday. Thursday they will sail aboard the Maasdam for a visit in Europe lasting probably until mid-April. The travelers will visit both Mrs. Smith's daughters, Miss Mimi Smith, who is studying in Paris instead of Smith College during her junior year, and Miss Susan Smith who is associated with the American Embassy in Madrid. Miss Mimi and Miss Susan have often visited St. Louis. Later, although her plans are still indefinite, Mrs. Borders probably will travel alone to various other European cities returning to this country somewhat later than her sister.

While in Europe she may meet her elder daughter, Miss Carolyn Borders, who with Miss Mary Mosby, daughter of John Charles Mosby, will sail April 6 to remain abroad until August. Landing in Lisbon, the young women will rent a car and will motor on the continent. They will also go to Edinburgh to see friends of Miss Borders who a year and a half ago studied at the University of Edinburgh.

Miss Kate Borders, a debutante of this year, will depart March 19 with a group of her contemporaries to spend three weeks in Delray Beach, Fla. With her will be Miss Jane Cochran, Miss Audrey Wallace, Miss Myrtle Boehmer, Miss Katharine Thomas, Miss Louise Conant and Miss Elizabeth Busch.

The young women have rented an apartment in Delray Beach for their stay there in the course of which Miss Borders and Miss Busch plan to go to Cuba for a week.

Before the debutantes' departure, Miss Borders and Miss Cochran will be guests of honor Saturday night, March 10, at a dinner to be given by Mrs. Hiram Norcross Jr. at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frank J. V. Krebs, 9365 Clayton road, Ladue.

Attending the party will be Miss Wallace, Miss Busch, Miss Frances Brown, Miss Claire Pieper, Miss Boehmer, Miss Ann MacCarthy and Miss Anne Collins. August A. Busch III, S. Fitzhugh Gordon Jr., G. David Stifel, James D. Street III, Jeffries Arrick, Peter Smith, G. Donald Gibbins Jr., David A. and John R. Ring.

Florida Trips for St. Louis Families.

SPRING vacation for St. Louis students at local and Eastern schools often means a time of travel as well as time off from studies. Several St. Louis families will take advantage of the spring recess and go in a group to Vero Beach, Fla., for the two-week break from classes.

Flying South March 20 will be Mr. and Mrs. Herbert N. Jones, 6464 Cecil avenue, Clayton, and their young son, Michael. They will be joined there by their debutante daughter, Miss Carol Bond Jones, from Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and their son, C. Norman Jones II, a student at Middlesex School, Concord, Mass.

Mrs. Robert J. Noland, Conway and Mason roads, St. Louis county, with her three daughters, Miss Nancy, Miss Betty and Miss Jody Noland, all Mary Institute students, and her son, Teddy, will motor to the Florida resort, leaving St. Louis March 16. En route to Vero Beach they will stop in Daytona Beach to visit Mr. Noland's mother, Mrs. Edward T. Noland of Clayton and Mason roads, who is spending the winter there and will return to St. Louis sometime in April.

Dr. and Mrs. William L. Macon, 4 Black Creek lane, Ladue, will also fly to Vero Beach, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Molly Macon, and Miss Molly's houseguest for the vacation period, Miss Lucy McKinley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Bent McKinley, 18 Pine Valley road, Clayton. The girls are freshmen at Mary Institute. The Macons, who have taken a cottage for two weeks, will also have with them their son, William L. Macon IV, who will make the trip South from Princeton University where he is a student.

Planning to spend the Mary Institute holidays at Gulf Hills, a dude ranch near Biloxi, Miss., are Mrs. Ralph E. Doughton, 7145 Westmoreland drive, University City, and her two daughters, Miss Patricia Ruth and Miss Sandra Lynne Doughton, students at Mary. With the Doughtons will be Mrs. George W. Beeler, 7221 Maryland avenue, University City, who will be accompanied by her daughter, Miss Janet Beeler, who also attends Mary Institute, and her son, George W. Beeler Jr., who will be on vacation from Country Day School.

My Day

Report on Washington Conference

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK.

I returned Tuesday afternoon to New York and to the work of the American Association for the United Nations with a feeling of support from many groups throughout the country. I hope that members of the association will not forget that they will achieve the objective of reaching a maximum number of people if they keep up this co-operation through the whole year.

At our Washington conference, the panels on economic development and collective security and the development of peaceful procedures were very successful. Keynote speaker for the economic development group was Representative Brook Hays, of Arkansas, who served on the United States delegation at the U.N. this past session.

The meeting on collective security and the development of peaceful procedures was keynoteed by James N. Hyde, a New York attorney, and Richard R. Wood, contributing correspondent to the Friends Journal.

ONE of the morning meetings was on "Atoms for Peace" and another on "Colonialism and the Struggle for Independence." These were followed by a luncheon meeting and discussion on developments in disarmament, continuing until 4:30 p.m.

The United States Committee for the United Nations Children's Fund arranged a meeting from 5 to 6 p.m., and later in the evening a reception was held in honor of diplomatic representatives of states affiliated with the U.N. This was planned particularly to welcome the representatives of states admitted to the U.N. in the last session.

The next morning, at the final plenary session, the findings of each section were presented to the conference and we closed at a luncheon reception presided over by the chairman of our board of directors, Oscar A. De Lima.

Representative Chester E. Mallow, of New Hampshire, who served on the delegation to the U.N. last year, and I tried to tell all those who have showed such an interest in the U.N. and the work of their own organization as it affected the U.N., what this interest would mean to the United States.

I PARTICULARLY HOPE that I was able to express to the co-operating groups what it means to the A.A.U.N. to find so many persons genuinely wanting to work together to achieve the results which are the chief reason for this organization being in the field of international interest.

Club to be held Monday at 2 p.m.

The program for the afternoon has been planned by the current literature section of which Mrs. Robert Kinsey is chairman. "So Near and Yet So Far," by Emily Kimbrough will be reviewed by Mrs. Douglas Vernon.

Tea will be served in the club dining room immediately following the program. Assisting at the tea tables will be Mrs. Hubert C. Hahn, Mrs. Robert Kinsey, Mrs. Frank S. Parker and Mrs. Curtis L. Stephens. Mrs. James Macnish is club hospitality chairman.

The forty-ninth anniversary of the N.R. Mothers' and Babies' Welfare Society will be celebrated at a luncheon Monday, March 12, instead of next Monday as was erroneously announced. The affair will be held in the ballroom of the Gatesworth Hotel.

Town and Country Toastmistress Club will meet Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Vernon's cafeteria, 15 North Meramec avenue, Clayton. Mrs. Anthony Mitchell, the president, will preside.

Martha Carr's

Today's column is devoted to teen-agers who are invited to submit their problems to Martha Carr.

Dear Martha:

We need your advice badly. We are two baffled teen-agers who have a problem. We are attractive girls and can get plenty of dates, but here is the problem. We like a boy until he asks us for a date and then we don't find him as interesting as he was before. How can we go about refusing them without hurting them. Please help us solve this problem.

BESSIE AND ZELDA.

Maybe you are being a little too choosy. A boy doesn't have to be strictly dreamboat in order to be attractive and a pleasant date. Don't turn them down just because they don't seem "interesting" on the first date. Maybe if you tried to bring them out a little, encouraged them to talk about something you both are interested in, you'd find them more fun than you think. If you just don't like them, however, you'll just have to turn them down and hope more fascinating beaux will show up soon.

Dear Martha:

CAN YOU PLEASE HELP US? I am 14 and I love a boy 16 very much, and vice versa. And we are going steady. His father is very strict about what he does. He doesn't want him to go out with girls or talk to them on the phone. He calls me after his father goes to bed, which is about 9 o'clock. Do you think he should tell his dad that he should go out more often and have more privileges at the age of 16.

TWO IN LOVE.

I agree that every young person should have the right to make friends, but I don't think he should be calling you behind his father's back. As much as you like each other, don't be guilty of sneaking around to see each other when his dad doesn't approve. I think he should feel free to talk to his father but it won't help to demand more privileges. A frank discussion and a spirit of co-operation would be much better.

Dear Martha:

I AM 14 YEARS OLD, and like a boy very much. Earlier in the winter he liked me, but now it is just the opposite. Although he does not like me, he still talks to me and when we go to the movies he always sits two rows in front of me, and tries to attract my attention. Please tell me what I can do to win him back.

KITTY.

If he doesn't like you, why do you think he tries to attract your attention? Apparently, he still likes you a little and maybe if you would speak to him when you see him he would start a conversation and you would find that you both enjoy each other's company. However, if he is making a nuisance of himself and disturbing others in the show, perhaps he's not the kind of boy your parents want you to be with.

Teen-agers: Write today for Martha Carr's free leaflet compiled especially for you, "E for Etiquette." Be sure to inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Real Problems

By Ruth Millett

WHY do the writers of TV dramas think that the average man and his wife are most interested in plays about psychopathic killers, young hoodlums running from the law or on parole, and in murder, murder, murder? Why do they think they're not interested in plays that attempt to solve some of the problems of everyday living?

RUTH MILLETT

For years both men and women have been writing me about their frustrations, their problems, and their struggles to make their marriages happier, to be better parents, and to help their aging parents find a satisfactory life. These are the things they think about and worry about. These are their challenges.

Plays touching on any of these problems, if well written and without pat endings, would surely find an interested audience. Why, then, are normal people trying to meet life's problems asked, night after night, to watch the solution to problems that in no way touch them directly or are ever likely to?

If we are going to have problem plays who not make them about problems that face a great majority of the people watching the screen?

Do the TV producers think the TV audience is made up of people who want to escape their real problems by watching plays about things so remote from them they don't seem real?

If they do they may be missing a bet. Certainly my mail doesn't indicate that people are trying to escape. People are looking desperately for answers to the problems of everyday living.

What a wonderful chance TV producers have to turn these problems into realistic dramas if they would only make the effort to give us something normal instead of so much neurotic nonsense.

Beauty After 40

By Edyth Thornton McLeod

HATS have never been prettier and to have a really well-groomed look you need a hat to top off your outfit.

The hat silhouette is the "more hat." This "more hat" look is not heavy but it is delightfully feminine and flattering and it is especially becoming to the after-forty woman.

The real fashion news in millinery for spring lies in the light, airy look which is also the trend in the spring ready-to-wear fabrics. Many of the hats are swathed in tulle, organza or chiffon. And even the rough straws have that light, airy feeling. The soufflé straws which look like delicious desserts are very important. The larger the hat the lighter it looks and some of the prettiest hats are nothing but wire frames with veiling or tulle swathed around, making a misty picture hat, and sometimes there are a few blossoms added.

Colors are more vivid than they have been for many springs. There is no one dominant color though warm beige tones appear frequently.

There is no question but that this season the hat dominates the costume.

One final note. You must be sure to co-ordinate your hair style with your hat. Almost all the hats are designed to be worn straight on the head or tilted forward almost to the brow. Your face appears small and delicate under the larger hat and wearing your hat straight on or with a forward tilt gives you a great air of sophistication and it's very "woman-like."

Be sure to wear a hat and not a place mat on your head!

Notes From Hollywood Scene

By Sheila Graham

HOLLYWOOD.

I HEARD from two oldtime movie greats recently—Mary Pickford, first star of them all, and Corinne Griffith, one of the brightest and most beautiful. Mary called about the sale, after 37 years, of her United Artists stock ownership. "I feel a little sad and a little lost," said the gracious woman who will always spell the enchantment of Hollywood for millions all over the world. "But my love for the motion-picture business is just as great and I will continue to work for its prestige and benefit." She always has.

My contact with Corinne was through her new book, "Eggs I Have Known." It's about food and was there when Lady Thelma Furness introduced the then Prince of Wales to the then Mrs. Wally Simpson. Lady Thelma gave Corinne the Prince's favorite "after-dinner course" or "savory." You can follow it in the book under "England's camembert cheese mold."

TO COME BACK to the immediate present, neither of the two most glamorous girls of Hollywood today—Anita Ekberg and Grace Kelly—had a man to her name at the Golden Globe awards, hosted by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association. Grace very sedately accepted the globe for Marlon Brando as well as herself. Her former flame, Jean Pierre Aumont, was as usual with pretty Marisa Pavan. There were few hits, misses or errors, but Jeanne Crain turned as red as her hair when she was asked to present the award to a star of tomorrow, Russ Tamblyn, instead of Arthur Kennedy for whom she had prepared a speech.

La Ekberg arrived alone, but the beautiful Swedish lass, with golden hair flowing on one side of her shoulder, was immediately surrounded by 50 photographers who clicked and clicked for 10 minutes without reloading. Reminded me of when Marilyn Monroe caught on with the camera men and the public. Susan Hayward was with Mike Connolly. Zsa Zsa Gabor, who always pays homage to beauty—her own and others—told the packed 800 at the Coconut Grove: "I can't stand the competition with Ekberg." Zsa's escort was millionaire builder Hal Hayes.

ANITA EKBERG...THE PHOTOGRAPHERS GAVE HER A BIG RUSH.

Errol Flynn quipped, "I've been away so long, I haven't even gotten around to Marilyn Monroe." Wife Pat Wynne laughed.

GREGORY PECK, one of the award presenters, was accompanied by wife Veronique, at her first big Hollywood function and very attractive in a black off-the-shoulder dress. Some of the picture studio biggies weren't too enthusiastic with the inclusion of awards to TV performers Dinah Shore, Walt Disney and Lucille Ball-Desi Anaz.

Don De Fore assures me that Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis have a chance to win an "Emmy"—that's the next mammoth prize party on March 17. "On all the nominations sent out," said the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Prexy, "there is one blank line for voters to list their own preferences." Robert Cummings is not yet definite to emcee the Hollywood end of these TV awards.

WRITER HELEN DEUTSCH, after 13 years of scripting top movies at Metro, has left the studio "to write two novels in the next five years."

Columbia figures that, since Jack Lemmon did so well in "Mr. Roberts," he should continue in the Navy. They've given him a co-starring role with Humphrey Bogart in "The Good Shepherd," for summer production.

Irish tenor Sean Meaney jokingly mentioned that he would have the blarney stone on his TV show St. Patrick's day, and anybody writing in could come and kiss it. His viewers took Sean seriously and swamped him with requests, but he has no idea how to get the stone over here from Ireland. Any suggestions?

Wear Shoes That Fit Your Feet

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D.

GIRLDES? Shoes? Which is a woman's greater nemesis? After a day of shopping—or, in fact, a day anywhere—is modern woman more distressed by a constricting girdle or by ill-fitting shoes? The vote is evident. The shoes have it.

Often when you have settled back to enjoy a movie, your wife has beat you to it in the art of relaxing: she has already kicked off her shoes.

You can go downtown without a hat. You can even leave your girdle behind. However, unless you're an African native, your shoes go with you. And with them, of course, your feet.

HERE ARE some observations that, I believe, will be helpful. Disorders of the feet are usually twofold: (1) Toes. (2) Arches. Toe trouble is practically always caused by tight fitting, ill-shaped shoes. Arch trouble is at least aggravated by a "poor fit."

Therefore, when you buy, better be influenced by comfort, rather than by style. Proper fitting, and shoe design are essential for normal foot function.

In buying for "style" it is inevitable that you pay in "discomfort." Extremely pointed shoes crowded the toes unnaturally. Remember that the shape of your toes differs from your neighbors'. What may be good for her (or him) may be "foot poison" for you. Low heels are best; but moderate heels are probably the most serviceable.

FOOT PROBLEMS often are a neglected part of medical care. In these days when the emphasis is on cancer, heart disease, diabetes and other agents of extinction, patients (and doctors, too) may forget to give feet the attention they deserve. Yet their proper care is an integral part of securing better efficiency.

If you are an African native, today's advice is not for you. People who do not wear shoes are strangers to foot trouble. But there is something here for the suffering men and women (mostly women) who live lives of semi-desperation and know not why. An ill-fitting, tight shoe can turn a mild-mannered man into a chronic grouch. A high-heeled, unbalanced, compressing shoe can actually "wear-out" the sturdiest of women.

Look to your feet. They are the forgotten members of your body. They are the only portions of our anatomy that are rigidly encased in artificial, unyielding, rigid covering.

Words, Wit and Wisdom—By William Morris

Cockles, Mussels and a Kettle of Fish.

WE often use the phrase "warm the cockles of one's heart" but I'm not at all sure I know just what it means. The main course at these affairs was salmon boiled in a huge pot of well-salted water and eaten in catch-as-catch-can fashion, rather in the style of our "chicken in the rough."

Give thought for a moment, dear reader, to the shambles likely to result from dozens of people trying to eat hot, boiled salmon with their fingers while sitting along the banks of a woodland stream—and you'll understand why the phrase "a pretty kettle of fish" has long been synonymous with confusion, muddle and mess.

The cockles of your heart, on the other hand, are its ventricles and thus, by extension, the innermost depths of one's heart or emotions. The word comes from the Latin phrase "cochleae cordis," meaning ventricles of the heart, while the shellfish cockle comes from the Latin "conchylium" meaning conch shell.

"That's a pretty kettle of fish" is an expression every one of us has heard many times—but did you ever know its origin? After all, there's no such thing as a "pretty" kettle of fish—and most true sporting fishermen prefer to broil or fry their catch anyway.

Well, the phrase came from

Prune Alaska

Ingredients: One egg white, one-half cup sugar, one jar (five ounces) strained prunes, one cup heavy cream, one-half teaspoon grated orange rind, one-half cup orange juice, one tablespoon lemon juice.

Method: Beat egg white until stiff but not dry; gradually beat in sugar. Fold in prunes. Beat cream until stiff; gradually fold in orange rind, orange juice and lemon juice. Fold into prune mixture. Turn into refrigerator tray and freeze until firm; have refrigerator at coldest setting. Makes six servings.

Designing Woman Light but No View

By Elizabeth Hillyer

WHEN a window's all too easy for the look into, how can it be curtailed to let in light? This is so often the problem when residences huddle close together, as in Mrs. J.B.B.'s case.

"I never have known what to do with the narrow window in the upstairs hall of our old-fashioned house. The only view outside is into other people's windows, and the hall is so dark. Sheer straight panels or tie-backs give us no privacy, but heavier curtaining all over the window means we keep the hall light on all day. Have you an answer to a question like this?"

Make a cafe type curtain, Mrs. B., of an opaque fabric, and make it long. Set the rod for it higher than the head of anyone standing or walking in the hall. Chances are the ceilings and the window are high and the remaining area of uncovered glass will let in plenty of light.

Tasty Tricks

Beets, broccoli, cabbage and even potatoes are all the better for an adroit touch of sour cream. Heat sour cream in double boiler with salt, pepper and a hint of cayenne. Mix or spread on cooked vegetables.

MRS. H.O.M. "I need new lamps, and I've never had enough decorative accessories for my living room. I'd like them in Chinese style, but wonder if they should be to go with eighteenth century mahogany. Should I at least buy a Chinese style coffee or occasional table to make them more appropriate?"

A table with the same design origin would be a good idea, but it isn't necessary if you do not add too many Chinese accessories. Chinese accessories were used with furniture of the type you have when it was first designed. Make sure the quality of your lamps and accessories is equal to that of the furniture—unhappily, some things in the style are unworthy.

Sheer Black Dresses. The late-day dress made of sheer black fabric is increasing in popularity. A favorite style has a shirred bodice and scooped neckline. Skirts usually are slim although the addition of deep pleats at the back relieves severity.

"WAS I TICKLED ...

JUST IN THE NICK OF TIME!"

It wasn't a matter of life or death... we had a pretty good deal cooking on a new "Chevy."

But just as we were about to go and close that other deal... Bill said: "Let's call Weber and check their Dial-A-Deal." We called... and we bought... AT WEBER!

The savings over the other deal was like getting a Christmas Bonus in March! Shouldn't you call Weber?

Play Safe While You Drive!

Avoid traffic jitters and driving drowsiness. Chew gum while you're behind the wheel. Chewing helps relieve strain and tension—helps keep you feeling fresh and alert for safer driving. Chew any brand of gum you like but chew while you drive. Naturally, we recommend refreshing, delicious Wrigley's Spearmint Gum—for lively, satisfying flavor and real chewing enjoyment.
